

CIA kill-Castro plans told Standby scheme rooted in White House 'talks'

By Nicholas M. Horrocks

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency prepared "contingency" plans for the assassination of Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba as a result of White House discussions, former agency officials have told the Rockefeller Commission.

According to one source, this "contingency" planning included "feelers" being put out to organized-crime figures Sam Giancana and John Roselli. The plans, one source said, were examined after top-level officials in the White House of President John F. Kennedy had wanted the question of assassinating Castro examined as one option to the growing Cuban problem in 1961 and 1962.

Several weeks ago McGeorge Bundy, then assistant to the president for national security affairs, told newsmen that White House officials did have discussions of "how nice it would be if this or that leader" were not around anymore. A former agency official, who declined to be identified, said these sort of informal White House thoughts resulted in "contingency planning at CIA."

John McCone, who was director of the CIA in late 1961 and 1962, has told reporters in the past that plans had been drafted for an assassination attempt but that they were never approved by anyone in authority and did not go forward.

According to the former agency official, the CIA did not draft these plans "on its own" but was operating as the result of a White House request. He declined to comment on whether the request came directly from Kennedy.

The details of the contingency plan were transmitted to the 54-12 Committee, predecessor of the 40

Committee, that supersecret group of policy makers who approve or disapprove all major covert operations, this source said, but the plan was not approved and did not proceed.

This version of the Castro assassination plot differs in emphasis from versions published in several columns by Washington newsmen Jack Anderson. In those accounts, the CIA recruited Giancana and Roselli, and Roselli made two actual attempts on the Cuban premier's life.

According to the high former official, the White House request for contingency planning came "from the highest level" and would not have been honored otherwise and was "handled on the highest level" at the CIA.

One source said several of these men had given the commission details confirming that a plan to kill Castro had been drawn up. What appears to be as yet unanswered is whether Kennedy ordered the alleged plan or whether it came from members of his staff.

New FBI spy plots bared by Justice Dept.

By AL EISELE and GIL BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department disclosed Friday that it has uncovered five more counterintelligence programs conducted by the FBI between 1960 and 1971 against domestic and foreign groups, including an attempt to pit organized crime elements against the American Communist Party.

Atty. Gen. Edward Levi made the disclosure in a letter to Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the committee's FBI oversight subcommittee.

In the letter, Levi said he first learned of the five new programs about a month ago after they were discovered by the FBI in a continuing review of the agency's counterintelligence files.

Levi said the five additional programs were uncovered after former Atty. Gen. William Saxbe disclosed the existence of seven FBI counterintelligence programs, known as Cointelpro, to the Edwards subcommittee last Nov. 20.

Levi described the newly discovered programs as "much narrower" in scope than the previous ones, and emphasized that like the others, they were discontinued in 1971. They include:

—A program aimed at militant groups seeking Puerto Rican independence, for which 37 actions were authorized between August, 1960, and its termination on April 8, 1971; —A program known as "Operation Hoodwink" aimed at pitting organized crime elements against the Communist Party USA, for which four actions were authorized between October, 1966, and July, 1968;

—Three foreign intelligence programs classified "secret," for which 12 actions were authorized between 1961 and 1971.

The largest of the newly discovered Cointelpro operations, that conducted against the Puerto Rican independence groups, included the mailing of anonymous letters to the groups and furnishing embarrassing information about the group and its leaders to the news media.

In another of the actions, the FBI sent an anonymous letter to two members of an independence group and to a local news medium asserting that one of the group's leaders was having a love affair with one of its members.

ALL four of the actions, authorized under "Operation Hoodwink," involved anonymous mailings, Levi said. They included sending a letter to an alleged organized crime figure with an article attacking labor practices at the figure's business. The letter was made to appear it had been written by Communist Party officials.

Another letter, also written to appear as if it came from the Communist Party, was sent to three alleged organized crime leaders. It denounced them for their alleged part in a bombing of Communist Party headquarters in New York City.

The three foreign intelligence programs included action by the FBI to revoke the visa of the wife of a member of a foreign Communist Party to discourage activities of her husband. The FBI also advised local authorities that supporters of a foreign-dominated group met frequently with prostitutes.

LEVI said the additional Cointelpro programs were uncovered by one of the FBI field offices, which department sources identified as that in New York City. Like the previous programs, all were ordered by the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Grim search for bodies

Police are shown Friday searching for more bodies buried in the rural Onsted, Mich., home once occupied by Gary A. Taylor, a former mental patient suspected of killing as many as 20 persons in California, Michigan, Texas and Washington state. Two nude bodies of women were unearthed Thursday. Taylor, whose shooting attacks on women in the 1950s gained him the nickname "Phantom Sniper of Royal Oak," is being held in Houston, Tex., on five sex charges.

Ford emphasizes diplomacy Mideast force ruled out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In sharp contrast with past administration statements, President Ford ruled out Friday the use of U.S. military force in response to any new Arab oil embargo.

Ford said none of America's plans for dealing with another embargo "incorporate any military operations." He said the United States has, instead, placed the entire emphasis of its Middle East policy on cooperation.

The President's policy — outlined in unambiguous terms during a White House interview — contradicted statements by other officials and thinly veiled hints by Ford himself on the possibility of military action.

But White House spokesman Ron Nessen, asked to explain the apparent policy switch, replied: "There is no change in policy. We never had a policy of going to war."

In two major speeches — at an energy conference in Detroit and at his only appearance at the United Nations last fall — Ford left open the possibility of U.S. military intervention in the event of a new embargo.

"It is difficult to discuss the energy problem without lapsing, unfortunately, into doomsday language," he said at the Detroit conference Sept. 23. "The danger is clear. It is very severe. Nevertheless I am very optimistic."

In March, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told 70 freshman congressmen the United States could be forced into "surrender or using military force" against oil states unless it develops independent energy supplies.

Nessen, commenting on Kissinger's statement, said: "It was not a prediction of what will happen but a

Ford threatens oil tariff hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford threatened Friday to add another dollar to the tariff on imported oil, saying it might spur a lagging Congress to act more quickly on national energy-saving legislation.

If Ford boosts the oil import tariff to $2 per barrel, it would add another penny and a half to the price of gasoline.

Obviously upset because Congress started its Memorial Day vacation without acting on an energy program, Ford said he would decide within 48 hours exactly what steps to take on his own.

Ford could order the import tariff raised as soon as June 1 to increase prices and thus cut consumption. In addition, he could take steps to remove price controls from domestic oil — an action that would more than double the price of almost half the oil produced in the U.S.

The President, who has twice delayed a tariff increase to allow time for congressional action, sharply criticized Congress for its failure to move more quickly.

"The Congress has failed very badly," he said in an interview with five foreign journalists. "They have done literally nothing to solve our energy problem."

"Perhaps the imposition of the extra dollar (on the tariff) will stimulate the Congress to meet the problem. I am very disturbed about Congress' lack of affirmative action."

An energy bill prepared by the House Ways and Means Committee is stuck in the Rules Committee, which will not decide until June 2 how much the measure can be amended on the House floor. Democratic leaders and the administration had both hoped originally the bill could reach the House floor before the Memorial Day recess started Friday.

Eliminating domestic price controls would boost the price of so-called "old oil" from its present price of $5.25 per barrel to a new level of more than $11 per barrel. About 40 per cent of the nation's domestic oil is sold at the controlled price.

Ford said the need to decrease U.S. reliance on foreign oil was made all the more urgent by the threat of an increase this fall in the price of petroleum from the Middle East. There have been predictions the price of foreign oil might be boosted as much as $2 per barrel in September.

Doctors complain that under the Behr Act they could be hit with a staggering increase in insurance rates next December, if they want coverage for later claims of malpractice which allegedly occurred in the second half of this year.

Eclipse over L.B. tonight

Associated Press

The earth will play celestial magician tonight, throwing its shadowy cloak over the moon and making it disappear before your very eyes.

The occasion is the first total eclipse of the moon visible from North America in more than three years. And, weather permitting, amateur astronomers and other interested observers from Canada to South America should get quite a show.

The eclipse will be visible in the Long Beach area from 10:03 to 11:33 p.m.

For those who want a good look, the Griffith Park Observatory is holding a special eclipse show — "In the Dark of the Moon."

Edwin Krupp, acting director of the observatory, said the presentation will start at 8 p.m. A free lecture and slide show will be given on the observatory's roof prior to viewing the eclipse, he said.

Brown signs malpractice insurance bill

Combined News Services

A stop-gap bill aimed at providing temporary, low-cost malpractice insurance for California doctors was signed by Gov. Brown Friday.

However David Willett, a lawyer for the California Medical Association, said the law "provides no immediate solution to the present crisis," and wouldn't end the current strike by hundreds of the state's doctors.

The law, SB 491, written by Sen. Peter Behr, R-Tiburon, sets up an insurance pooling system to provide the doctors insurance to the end of this year at only slightly increased cost.

THIS malpractice insurance would be available at rates of about $2,000 for the rest of 1975. Current malpractice rates are as high as $18,000 a year for anesthesiologists and other doctors in high-risk specialties.

The new law provides insurance under a "claims made" basis. Doctors have strongly objected to this type of coverage, which frees insurance companies of responsibility for claims filed after the policy has expired.

Willett said the new law will be significant only if the Legislature also passes a law to clamp a lid on malpractice insurance rates and to provide "occurrence" coverage.

"Occurrence" insurance would cover claims for damages allegedly suffered when the policy was in effect, but not filed until after the policy had expired.

"TO OBTAIN the degree of protection a doctor needs, he must pay in December the rate now being sought by Argonaut — a prohibitively priced insurance policy," Willett said.

Doctors complain that under the Behr Act they could be hit with a staggering increase in insurance rates next December, if they want coverage for later claims of malpractice which allegedly occurred in the second half of this year.

Earlier Friday, the Assembly Ways and Means Committee approved 11-0 another bill, AB 928, introduced by the Assembly's only physician. It would provide malpractice coverage for the next six months at only 50 per cent more than the level of Jan. 1.

The bill was sent it to the floor for a vote Tuesday.

BY CONTRAST, the Senate bill signed Friday temporarily rolls rates back to Jan. 1 levels in counties where costs are so high that the public health and safety is endangered.

Republican Assemblyman Robert McLennan, the Downey physician who wrote the bill passed by the Ways and Means Committee, held a news conference after the committee action.

He urged striking doctors to suspend their current strike for 90 days to give the legislature time to solve the malpractice insurance problem.

The striking doctors, mostly anesthesiologists, have refused to treat any but emergency cases, and their boycott has led to layoffs of hundreds of hospital workers in California.

MEASURES similar to the one signed Friday have been enacted this week in Florida and New York.

Legislatures in New Hampshire, Illinois and Tennessee also have passed malpractice insurance relief laws recently, and 35 other state legislatures are considering such bills.

GI bill checks to be late for 300,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — The GI Bill benefits checks of at least 300,000 veterans probably will be delayed next month because Congress has failed to agree yet on the annual spring supplemental appropriations bill, budget officials said Friday.

Another 1.1 million recipients will not be affected unless Congress takes even longer than expected to act on the appropriations measure, they said.

The problem is that there is only about $200 million in the account which the Veterans Administration uses to pay GI Bill educational and training benefits. VA officials say that is enough to last the rest of this month.

But they said there are no funds available for checks scheduled to go out in June, the last month of the current fiscal year.

Money for the June checks — $425 million — was contained in the $15 billion supplemental appropriations bill. But Congress left on its Memorial Day recess Thursday and does not return until June 2, the day that VA officials had planned to send the first vouchers for June benefits to the Treasury, which in turn sends out the checks.

Those checks will be delayed for sure, VA budget officials said.

VA officials said they also expect the delay to affect checks to be paid from vouchers scheduled to go to the Treasury on June 6 and June 9. That would mean delaying $100 million worth of checks in all, they said.

Hopefully, VA officials said, checks scheduled to go out later in the month will be on time. But, if action on the appropriations bill is longer than expected after Congress returns to work, additional benefits checks will be held up, VA officials said.

MOST other federal programs to be funded by the supplemental bill are expected to continue uninterrupted.

In most cases enough money is on hand to pay for these programs until Congress acts. But in at least one case, the food stamps program, payments are expected to continue even if funds run out temporarily because to do otherwise would bring chaos.

Officials said it would be impossible to recall food stamp coupons in circulation, which are redeemed by the Treasury as they come in from banks.

Besides, Agriculture Department officials say, there is some money available in another account.

Military takes power in Beirut

Combined News Services

BEIRUT — President Suleiman Franjeh Friday night appointed the first military cabinet in Lebanon's history in an attempt to restore order here. The cabinet announcement came minutes after a new cease-fire was announced in the fighting between right-wing Phalangists and Palestinian guerrillas. A cease-fire arranged Thursday night failed to hold. In new clashes Friday, five persons were killed, raising to 28 the death toll since the fighting began five days ago. The number of wounded was said to range from 100 to 150. The military cabinet is headed by a retired brigadier general, Nureddin Rifai, a Sunni Moslem who has served as commander of the internal security forces. The president took the move after two days of consultations with the 99 members of Lebanon's unicameral parliament. The majority of the deputies gave him the power to choose the cabinet he saw fit, with the recommendation that its main mission be to reestablish order.

Spain to free Sahara

MADRID — The Spanish government, pressured by Arab neighbors and native dissidents, announced Friday it was ready to give independence to phosphate-rich Spanish Sahara "in the shortest period possible." Spain declared last August at the United Nations it would free the colony in northwest Africa and asked the international body to organize a referendum to determine the wishes of the 76,000 inhabitants of the desert territory, many of them nomads. Following a meeting of Gen. Francisco Franco and his cabinet Friday, however, the government announced: "Spain will not try in any way to prolong its presence in the Sahara, and never intend to take any advantage, political or material." Spain had earlier planned a referendum in the first half of this year. The new announcement followed trouble with Saharan natives and threats by Morocco, Algeria and Mauritania to liberate all or parts of the territory. The government decision was in line with earlier suggestions by Spanish officials that Spain not risk a debilitating colonial conflict at the end of Franco's rule.

Soviet trade gain

MOSCOW — Official Soviet figures for 1974 confirmed Friday a major swing toward trade with Western industrial countries and showed the Soviet Union recorded a surplus in trade with the West. Details became available with publication of the Foreign Trade Ministry's statistical review and showed a favorable hard-currency trade balance with the West of 110.8 million rubles — $158.4 million at the official exchange rate. This was the first time in many years that the Soviets earned a favorable trade balance with the West. In 1973, for example, there was a Soviet deficit of $1.2 billion. A striking feature of 1974 Soviet foreign trade was a 48 per cent jump in trade with Western nations, which that now account for 31.3 per cent of total Soviet trade turnover. In 1973 trade with the West was 26.6 per cent of the total and in 1970 only 20 per cent.

Strikers back on job

SAN JUAN, P.R. — San Juan Star workers voted Friday to obey a court order and return to work Saturday, ending a 23-day strike that halted publication of the paper. The 265 workers represented by the local unit of the American Newspaper Guild also voted to give their negotiating committee another strike vote to exercise as it sees fit as soon as the court injunction expires. 1 killed, 2 missing in flour mill blast

DAVENPORT, Iowa — A powerful explosion ripped through a grain milling complex along the Mississippi River shortly after noon Friday, killing one person, injuring several others and leaving two persons missing. Authorities Friday night identified the dead man as Perrel Cleeton, 42, of Davenport, an employee of the International Multi-Food Corp., where the explosion occurred. Six persons were hospitalized with injuries from the blast, and two unidentified persons were still missing Friday night. Scott County Sheriff Kenneth Paulsen said the two missing persons probably were either buried under the scattered debris or blown into the river. There were 13 employees and two grain officials in the area at the time of the explosion.

Railway wage proposal

WASHINGTON — A presidential emergency board trying to head off a nationwide railroad strike recommended Friday that the railway clerks' union accept basically the same settlement approved earlier by other rail unions. The Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks failed to offer "convincing proof" for a higher wage settlement from the pattern established earlier by seven other unions, the board said in submitting its recommendations to President Ford. The board's recommendations are not binding. Under federal railway-labor law both union and management negotiators must observe a 30-day cooling-off period, when they may consider the board's findings and possibly resume negotiations.

7 reported held by Cuba

MIAMI — Seven missing fishermen, including a 13-year-old boy, have been held in Cuba since their vessels were seized by Cuban gunboats nearly two months ago, the Miami News said Friday. "We've just been informed by the Swiss embassy in Havana that the men are in Cuba," an unidentified State Department source in Washington was quoted as saying. Other State Department officials in Washington could not confirm the report. The seven, all Cuban exiles, were first reported missing March 31 when they failed to return to Key West from a fishing expedition.

Inmates seize cellblock

FORT MADISON, Iowa — Inmates seized control of a maximum-security cellhouse at the Iowa State Penitentiary Friday night and held one guard hostage. Officers from southeast Iowa were called in to quell the disturbance. No injuries were reported. A prison spokesman said no shots had been fired in the prison but said "at least eight or ten" tear gas projectiles were launched into the cellhouse with special weapons. Late Friday night, the rebellious prisoners and guards were at a standoff and a potentially dangerous situation existed in Cellhouse 19.

Ford pardons ex-Teamster chief Beck

Combined News Services

President Ford has granted a "full and unconditional" pardon to former Teamsters President Dave Beck, the Justice Department announced Friday in Washington.

Beck was convicted in 1959 of helping to prepare false union income tax returns. He served 2½ years of a five-year prison term and now lives in Seattle, Wash.

Ford granted the pardon Thursday, according to a spokesman at the Justice Department.

No reason was given for the pardon.

Beck, 81, who became a full-time union official in 1926 and rose to the presidency of the Teamsters in 1952, has been out of jail and off parole for many years.

An attorney for the firm which has represented Beck explained that the effect of the pardon is to restore to Beck his full civil rights, some of which are lost when a person is convicted of a felony.

Beck was succeeded as Teamsters president by James Hoffa, who was himself convicted of jury tampering in 1967 and sentenced to 13 years in jail. Hoffa was freed in 1971 by then-President Richard M. Nixon on condition that he not engage in union activities until 1980.

Beck took over the Teamsters when the union had only 180,000 members and presided over its fastest period of growth. The union had 2.4 million members when Beck turned over the reins to Hoffa.

At his peak, Beck was a wealthy man — a shrewd investor whose real estate speculations paid great dividends. In 1950 he was elected to the presidency of the board of regents of the University of Washington.

But in 1957, a Senate Rackets Committee accused him of 52 instances of misusing his position, and Robert Kennedy charged that he had stolen $300,000 from the union.

Cargo

Former British Prime Minister Edward Heath was unable to catch the last commercial flight out of London Thursday night and an alternate arrangement fell through for getting him to the U.S. in time for a speaking appearance in Washington.

So Heath arrived Friday aboard a Pan American World Airways cargo freighter.

"We obtained a waiver to carry him on the cargo plane and he was sold a regular round trip ticket," said an airline spokesman. "He rode in the observer's seat in the back of the cockpit." There was no stewardess and no champagne, but Heath "was served a crew meal and there was plenty of coffee," the spokesman said. After arriving at John F. Kennedy Airport, Heath shook hands with the pilot, Capt. Stanley E. Johnson, and thanked him for a nice flight.

Heath took a private plane to Washington. He plans to return to London Sunday — aboard a regular commercial flight.

Unconditional Pardon

Royal first

Queen Margrethe II of Denmark set out on an historic three-day voyage on the royal yacht Dannebrog on Friday, heading for Leningrad to become the first crowned head from Western Europe to visit the Soviet Union since the 1917 revolution.

The 35-year-old queen and Prince Henrik, her French-born husband, are scheduled to step ashore in Leningrad next Monday for a week-long state visit highlighted by a banquet in the Kremlin.

Margrethe II was originally invited to visit the Soviet Union in 1972 when she was still heirress to the Danish throne. The visit was postponed because of the death of her father, King Frederik IX.

Unsuccessful

Long Island policeman Ben Huggard, troubled by stinging jelly fish and a protective antishark cage which fell apart, late Friday called off his attempt to swim a record 165 miles.

The 35-year-old swimmer, who told his trainer when he entered the water at Thursday afternoon "don't pull me out unless I'm dead," climbed aboard the support boat "Fintales" some 28 hours after he started off Marathon in the Florida Keys.

The exact point of where he emerged from the water and the distance he had traveled could not be determined immediately. It was somewhere southwest of Bimini, a group of three small islands about 50 miles east of Miami. Conceivably Huggard might have attained his goal of topping the 91-mile distance swim record set in 1972 in the Florida Straits.

Selassie

Ethiopia's military leaders who overthrew Emperor Haile Selassie eight months ago said Friday he is seriously ill and may need surgery.

The official Ethiopian radio in Addis Ababa said the 82-year-old Selassie is suffering from an ailment of the prostate gland. It said his condition has become more stable.

Comedienne Moms Mabley dies

Moms Mabley, the rubber-faced comedienne with the toothless grin and baggy clothing, died in White Plains, N.Y., Friday night after a long illness. She was 77.

A hospital spokesman said Miss Mabley had been a patient there for several weeks.

The black entertainer's first movie was released earlier this year after a delay resulting from a heart attack she suffered. A pacemaker was implanted and she returned to the set.

In the movie, "Amazing Grace," Moms played Grace Teasdale Grimes, an honest woman whose sincerity brought down a corrupt city government.

Born Loretta Aiken in Brevard, N.C., she entered show business 60 years ago, entertaining at church fund-raising events. She soon graduated to the black vaudeville circuit.

"There were some horrible things done to me," she told an interviewer last February. "I've played every state in the union — except Mississippi. I won't go there. They ain't ready."

She entertained with the big bands, like Count Basie's, but she came into her own in the 1950s. Tottering on stage in run-over shoes, the inevitable hat perched on her head, Moms told folks what was going on in the world. "Every comedian has stolen from me but Jack Benny. He was an original," she once said.

Music man

Conductor James Levine will be music director of the Metropolitan Opera beginning next season, Metropolitan Opera Association President William Rockefeller announced Friday in New York.

Association officials said Levine, who will remain as principal conductor through next season under conditions of his present agreement, will have primary responsibility for artistic matters in his new position.

Levine made his debut with the Met conducting "Tosca" during the 1971 June Festival. He has also conducted "Otello," "Falstaff," "Wozzeck," and "I Vespri Siciliani" and others.

Successor

Julia Vadera Taft, a Health, Education and Welfare Department official, succeeded L. Dean Brown on Friday as head of President Ford's inter-agency refugee task force.

Brown, a retired State Department official, resigned to return to his job as president of the Middle East Institute.

Paternity

My ex-husband died 5 years ago and I have three children by him. I receive Social Security benefits under his account for my first two children, but not for the last one. Our interlocutory divorce decree was granted in September 1962. We went back together in January 1963 for a few weeks, but that didn't work out and we just let the divorce go through. The divorce was finalized Sept. 20, 1963 and my son was born the following month. After my ex-husband died, I applied for Social Security payments and was told that since he hadn't signed my last child's birth certificate, I couldn't collect the benefits for him. Isn't my ex-husband the legal father of my son? E.S., Lakewood.

No. Your son was deemed ineligible for payments since conception occurred while you and your ex-husband were legally separated (after the interlocutory decree was issued) and you have no documentary proof that he fathered your third child. As far as the Social Security Administration is concerned, your child is illegitimate and your ex-husband made no formal attempt to legitimize the child prior to his death. If he had named your son in a will as his child or filed some other type of affidavit before he died, the child probably would be eligible for benefits. You were turned down not because your ex-husband didn't sign the birth certificate, which he wasn't required to do anyway, but because he isn't listed as the father. The certificate says "refused to state" where the name of the father should be and since you are listed as the person supplying the information on the child, you apparently at the time declined to name your ex-husband as the father and you have no evidence that outweighs this document.

Unwarranted?

Last year the police in Los Angeles County held what was called a "forgiveness month" for people who had outstanding warrants. Can Action Line find out if it will be repeated this year and if so, when? Will Orange County do the same thing? J.W., Long Beach.

There currently are no plans for such a program this year in Los Angeles or Orange County, according to court spokesmen. The two-month forgiveness period last April and May was instigated by the Los Angeles central judicial district and several other courts in the county decided to participate, but some, including the Long Beach district, did not. None of the courts in Orange County went along with the plan. During the grace period, which covered only warrants for traffic and parking tickets, individuals were required to pay just the fine for the original citation. An estimated 100,000 warrants were cleared in Los Angeles County during those two months. Court officials decided to not make the forgiveness plan an annual program because they fear that traffic violators will refuse to pay their fines on schedule if they believe they can simply hold off until the next grace period.

Currency exchange

I have some foreign money and want to know how to exchange it for U.S. currency. I have a confederate bill also and want to know its value. Can you help? Mrs. H.M., Long Beach.

Most large banks have foreign currency exchange departments which will buy back foreign money in current circulation at a discount price. You can take yours to one of their branches or to Deak and Co. of Los Angeles Inc., a foreign exchange firm, 605 S. Hill St., Los Angeles. The amount you'll get in return will vary slightly between each exchanger, so if your money is worth several hundred dollars, it would pay you to shop around, said Tom Kelly, vice president and manager of Deak and Co. He said they are paying "about 2 per cent below the going rate of exchange" and aren't taking Cambodian and Vietnamese currency right now. The value of your confederate bill will depend on the value a collector puts on it. You can have it appraised by Deane A. Duffy, paper money specialist at Liberty Coin Co., 1053 South St., and possibly sell it to him. Your bill may be counterfeit, he warned. It isn't against the law to reproduce these bills since they aren't legal tender and many copies have been printed, he said.

Volunteer

I am retired, but I'm still healthy and would like to do some volunteer work. Can Action Line tell me how I can get started? W.G., Long Beach.

You can sign up with the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP), 201 E. Broadway, 432-6427, which recruits elderly individuals who are willing to donate their time for various worthwhile causes. The Long Beach office is open Mondays through Fridays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Residents of Lakewood and Bellflower can sign up for that area's RSVP program at the Lakewood Youth Center, 4658 Woodruff Ave., 866-8771, Mondays, Wednesdays or Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. RSVP, which is partly funded by the federal government, reimburses its volunteers for some of their transportation expenses. The Community Volunteer office, 3515 Linden Ave., 426-7171, coordinates volunteer work for adults of all ages. This agency, which is a branch of the United Way, continually needs volunteers who will provide transportation, run errands for elderly or handicapped individuals or do a variety of other work for local charitable organizations. This agency does not have sufficient funds to reimburse its volunteers.

Consumer chief joins drug suit

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The State Consumer Affairs Department Friday said it is intervening on the side of consumers in a lawsuit seeking to allow substitution of generic-name drugs for more expensive brand-name drug products.

Director Taketsugu Takei said the suit was filed against the state Board of Pharmacy in San Francisco Superior Court March 20 by the Consumer's Union and the California Coalition for Medical Rights of Women.

The suit alleges that the use of brand-name drugs is a violation of equal protection in state regulations because Medi-Cal regulations allow generic substitutions. But board action denies the cost benefit to those not under Medi-Cal, the suit contends.

The suit also alleges that because seven of the eight board members are pharmacists, the board cannot issue regulations which fix prices and limit competition.

Weather picture bright

Holiday start clogs roads

Campers competed with commuters to clog Southern California freeways Friday afternoon, as many motorists got an early start on the long Memorial Day weekend.

The weather picture looked bright for the start of the summertime recreation season, with forecasters predicting sunny skies and warm temperatures from the mountains to the sea.

And, unlike last year—when gas was in short supply—many service stations plan to be open throughout the long weekend.

Highway patrol Sgt. David Helso said the CHP plans "heavy deployment" over the weekend. He also noted that Las Vegas-bound motorists will be helped in maintaining safe speeds between Los Angeles and the Nevada border via a limited CHP escort service.

The National Weather Service says mountain resorts will have high temperatures in the low 70s. Beach highs will range from 75 to the low 80s after early morning clouds disappear.

Morris Lubarsky of the Los Angeles County Recreation Department said Lakes Castaic and Bonelli will both be open.

"We are expecting a lot of people and are staffed for the large crowds," he said.

A spokesman for the county beaches warned swimmers that riptides are expected.

Los Angeles International airport is also anticipating a heavy weekend and a spokesman advised travelers to allow themselves "at least an hour extra in coming to the airport during peak travel hours."

in their car trunk

A Beverly Hills couple were locked in their car trunk for several hours after being kidnaped and robbed of more than $10,000 in cash and jewels, police said Friday.

Officers said Henry Splevin, 61, and his wife Stephanie, 60, said they were accosted by two armed men Thursday night.

The couple told officers they were forced to drive into an underground apartment parking garage while a gun was held to Mrs. Splevin's head.

In the garage they said the gunmen took $1,000 in cash from Splevin and an estimated $10,000 in jewelry from his wife, police said.

The couple were then forced into the trunk and driven around for several hours until they were released unharmed, officers said.

No arrests have been made.

King of Capitol Hill

Congressmen will display their athletic prowess on national TV in the fall on CBS' "Sports Spectacular" to determine who's King of Capitol Hill, it was announced Friday in Washington. Some of the "superstars" participating include Sen. Floyd Haskell, D-Colo., tip-toeing his way to tennis fame while Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-

Conn., awaits the return shot; Sen. Peter Domenici, R-N. M. and Rep. Walter Fauntroy, D-D.C., left, pedaling bicycles; and Sen. William "belly-flop" Brock, R-Tenn., who has fallen off the diving board as pretty Dee Dworken wonders whether or not she should record his time.

New Turk-Greek war feared as result of arms embargo

TORREJON AIR BASE, Spain (UPI) — The American ban on arms shipment to Turkey may trigger a Turkish military assault against Greece, a senior U.S. official aboard Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's plane said Friday night.

Kissinger, returning from his first foreign tour since major U.S. foreign policy setbacks in Indochina and the Middle East, flew here from Ankara, Turkey for a brief stop-over and talks with Spanish Foreign Minister Pedro Cortina.

THE official cited Turkish anger over Greece's fortifying Aegean islands at a time when Greece and Turkey are disputing ownership of oil reserves in the Aegean sea. He linked this to Turkish military shortages due to the U.S. arms embargo.

"If the Turks run out of spare parts, they may decide to use their army before it becomes useless," the senior official said.

Kissinger found the Turks — the government, the opposition parties, the military, and the public — "profoundly offended" by the arms ban, the official said.

The U.S. Congress voted the ban after Turkey invaded Cyprus last July. Kissinger argued the ban robbed him of using U.S. arms shipments as pressure on the Turks to get them into a Cyprus settlement with Greece. The Senate voted this week, 41-40, to lift the ban, but the House, where pro-ban forces are stronger, has yet to act.

In two days of talks with Turkish leaders, Kissinger tried to reassure them that America remains their ally and expressed U.S. desire to help bring a Turkish-Greek settlement. But he found the Turks talking tough about the arms ban.

According to the senior U.S. official, the Turks talk of shutting at least some of the most vital of the 27 U.S. military bases in Turkey unless a House vote in the immediate future removes the embargo.

In Turkey, military sources said the U.S. bases in question are those which electronically monitor military and other communications inside the Soviet Union.

Kissinger, whose plane stopped for an hour at the U.S. Air Force base at Torrejon to give him a chance to talk with Spain's foreign minister on such matters as Portugal's shift to the far left, was carrying home some hope from Turkey.

The senior official said that in Ankara the secretary got the impression that the Turks "are feeling their way to making a settlement" with the Greeks over Cyprus.

HE SAID the Turkish and Greek positions on what to do about Cyprus — an island republic just off Turkey's coast with a Greek Cypriot majority in population and a Turkish Cypriot minority — "are not that far apart."

NATO warns on Red arms tactic

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The NATO allies Friday said the Soviet Union is trying to steal a strategic advantage over the United States by building more sophisticated and more powerful missiles.

The statement was part of a 16-point declaration of longterm tasks and goals issued during a two-day conference here by defense ministers who form NATO's Defense Planning Committee.

The document also said the expanding Soviet navy "could be used against NATO forces at sea, or against our maritime lines of communication, in order to interfere with the economies and vital supplies of NATO nations."

It said: "Although the atmosphere in East-West relations has improved over the last decade it remains a fact that the Warsaw Pact continues to maintain a military capability much greater than that needed for self-defense."

Purpose of the document was to provide guidelines for the defense ministries of member nations to follow in their longterm planning reaching into the 1980s. Only about half of the document was made public. The rest, containing precise proposals and definitions of need, remained secret.

NATO's document noted the Soviets already have achieved "rough parity" with the United States in the field of strategic nuclear weapons. "The Soviet Union now seems to be seeking to attain a strategic advantage through the development of more sophisticated and powerful missiles."

Ford slip bares secret Soviet-Israeli meetings

BY BERNARD GWERTZMAN
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Well-placed sources said Friday that the Soviet and Israeli ambassadors to the United States have held several unpublicized meetings here in recent months to discuss relations between their countries. Soviet-Israeli ties have been broken since 1967.

There have been rumors for some time about meetings between the Soviet envoy, Anatoly F. Dobrynin, and his Israeli counterpart, Simcha Dinitz.

But they were confirmed by the sources Friday only after President Ford said — apparently inadvertently — at a televised interview that the Russians "have been meeting officially, diplomatically, with representatives from Israel."

NEITHER Moscow nor Jerusalem has ever officially confirmed such contacts, and Ford's comments surprised some State Department officials.

Last month, an Israeli newspaper disclosed that two Soviet representatives had visited Israel and conferred with Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin and other leaders about the prospects for a new Geneva Conference on the Middle East and other issues. In addition to the Dinitz-Dobrynin diplomatic channel, it was also rumored that the Israeli and Soviet envoys in Bonn, and permen of the Geneva conference.

Some Israeli press reports have said that the Russians have recently suggested that they would be willing to re-establish ties after sufficient progress toward a settlement was noted, without waiting for a final settlement.

Exclusive N.Y. Times Service

haps some other countries, had also met secretly.

The Soviet Union broke diplomatic relations with Israel in June, 1967, following the Israeli victory in the six-day war against Egypt, Syria and Jordan. The Israelis have said they were ready to restate ties at any time, but the Russians have up to now insisted that relations could not be restored until after a settlement was achieved in the Middle East.

THE LACK of relations with Israel has hampered Soviet efforts to compete with the United States in Middle East diplomatic efforts. The Russians and Americans are cochair-

Ford, asked about the Middle East, said that after he meets with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Premier Rabin next month "we will lay out what we think is the best solution" for the Middle East.

HE SEEMED to be suggesting that he would propose a detailed American peace plan for the area, something that Secretary of State Kissinger has up to now resisted, preferring to go step by step.

The United States has been conducting a Middle East policy reassessment for two months. The statement, Ford said, would contain details on how to implement the United Nations resolutions calling for a peace settlement.

Crucial would be the American view of whether Israel must withdraw from all territory occupied since the June, 1967, war, as demanded by the Arabs. The Israelis have refused to give up all the land, asserting that the new frontiers must be secure and defensible.

Neither the Soviet nor the Israeli embassies would comment on the Dobrynin-Dinitz meetings.

One informant said there had been five meetings; another said there had been six; and a third informant said both figures were wrong but would not supply the correct one.

BOTH Dobrynin and Dinitz are well-known in diplomatic circles here for at least one reason: they each have no trouble in gaining access to Kissinger. The secretary, who usually disdains seeing envoys on routine business, regularly meets with Dobrynin, with whom he discusses urgent Soviet-American problems.

Ever since the October, 1973, Arab-Israeli war, Dinitz has had in his office a "hot line" to Kissinger's office where he can receive calls immediately. He also sees Kissinger every two weeks or so.

U.S. may buy Ore.

mine units

BEND, Ore. (AP) — U.S. Pumice Co. wants the federal government to buy the firm's mining claims at Rock Mesa in the Three Sisters Wilderness Area, and top officials of the U.S. Forest Service apparently favor the idea.

Wendell Wyatt, former Oregon congressman who now represents U.S. Pumice, said Wednesday in a telephone conversation from his Portland law office that Forest Service officials in Washington, D.C., have expressed interest in federal acquisition of the 10 claims.

Philippines bid for land return

MANILA (UPI) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos, Friday called for the return of sections of two huge American military bases in the Philippines and openly questioned the need for the facilities.

Marcos also said his country was fighting for "sheer physical survival" in the wake of Communist victories elsewhere in Asia and suggested the Philippine-American Mutual Defense Treaty was a "dead letter."

"It is not my intention to wave a placard saying Americans go home; our people are far too deeply attached to reach this point of bitterness," Marcos said in a major policy speech to the nation. "But the Americans must understand."

The largest cuts would affect Clark Air Base, the biggest outside the continental United States and home of the 13th Air Force, and Subic Naval Base, which between them have a population of about 14,000 U.S. military personnel and 46,000 Filipino workers.

Marcos requested the return of Sangley Point, a potential shipbuilding area, and several hundred acres of forest land from Subic and about 25,000 acres from Clark.

"The U.S., we hope, will understand, must understand that we in the Philippines face something of greater magnitude than indignity or shock (over the Vietnam war and its outcome), and this is sheer physical survival," Marcos said.

"The U.S. must understand that we cannot wait until events overtake us and our country. We reserve the right to make our own accommodation with the new realities of Asia."

"I do ask, with all the sincerity of trusted friends whether the bases have not outlived their usefulness, whether they have not lived beyond their appointed task. I do ask whether our mutual defense treaty in the light of Indochina has not become a dead letter."

Marcos said the first priority of the new Philippine foreign policy would be to strengthen ties with other members of the Association of South East Asian Nations and to press for a Southeast Asian zone of peace and neutrality.

The Philippines would also step up efforts to establish relations with Communist countries and seek closer ties with the developing nations, he said, while maintaining good relations with the United States and Japan.

Subic Bay, a natural deep harbor, is considered vital to the U.S. 7th Fleet in the Pacific.

Marcos also called for minor cuts at Camp John Hay, a facility used for military recreation in the mountains of Luzon Island.

The Philippines and Thailand are the only ASEAN members with U.S. military bases. Thailand has already demanded the pullout of all American troops by next March.

The other members — Malaysia, Singapore and Indonesia — receive small quantities of American military aid and training.

FORMER South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky is greeted Friday by his wife at Dulles International Airport. —UPI

Ky joins family, tells John Wayne aid offer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former South Vietnamese Vice Premier Nguyen Cao Ky, sporting an American flag pin in his lapel, was reunited with his family Friday night for the first time since the fall of Saigon.

He was greeted at Dulles airport near here by his wife and four of their children.

Ky, who spent the last 18 days in a refugee resettlement tent city at Camp Pendleton, smiled and held Mme. Ky by the arm and gave the children — three girls and a boy — pieces of chocolate. He said his family would celebrate with some "100 per cent Vietnamese food."

Ky said he planned to return with his family to the West Coast after a week's visit here and try to set up a farming community for refugees. He said he had received several offers of help — the latest from actor John Wayne.

"I think a lot of people tried to help," he said.

"Two days ago, I received a letter from John Wayne the movie actor. He has been in the hospital and he wrote me a letter offering 17,000 acres in Arizona. I am going to see him in the hospital."

Ky said he hoped through his plan "to give the Vietnamese a piece of land and to be self-sufficient in a short time."

"I will actually work on the farm," he said, adding that he had farmed for two years in Vietnam.

Mme. Ky, who was clad in a green V-neck dress, drove her husband and the children to an undisclosed location in suburban Virginia where the family has been staying since they left Saigon a few days before the Communists took over. One son had been away at school.

Ky's American sponsor, Jack Bailey of San Francisco, made the flight with him and accompanied the family when they left the airport.

OFFICIALS of Sea-Land Service, Inc., of Menlo Park, N.J., owners of the Mayaguez, originally had volunteered to open all 77 containers in Singapore where the ship went following its rescue. The offer was not taken up and the vessel left Singapore with its cargo intact.

On its arrival in Hong Kong, newsmen asked to inspect the cargo and Sea-Land officials volunteered to open all the containers. When newsmen learned it would take almost 10 hours to open all of them, they agreed to inspect six containers to be selected at random by reporters.

All the cargo was consigned from Oakland, Calif., to Utopia Air Base in Thailand, where U.S. forces launched the assault to rescue the ship and 39-member crew.

Sea-Land officials said all the cargo aboard the Mayaguez would be transferred to another company freighter which will leave today for Thailand.

THE MAYAGUEZ is scheduled to remain in Hong Kong until May 29 when it will sail for the U.S. naval base at Subic Bay in the Philippines.

HONG KONG (AP) — The Mayaguez steamed into Hong Kong Friday and at the request of newsmen its owners opened six randomly selected containers which held nothing but auto parts, fertilizers, butane gas, paint, office equipment and toilet paper.

"We had no intelligence equipment aboard the ship," Capt. Charles T. Miller of Fountain Valley, Calif., told newsmen. "They thought the ship was armed but we had no arms. I didn't even have a gun."

The Cambodians seized the Mayaguez May 12 on charges the ship was spying off their coast and carrying plastic bombs and radio-electronic equipment. The United States rescued the ship and crew May 15.

Immediately after the news conference, Miller put in a long distance telephone call to Terra Linda, Calif., and spoke with his son James and daughter Cheryl whom he had not seen since he and their mother were divorced 22 years ago.

"Where is Terra Linda?" Miller asked his

Some refugees may find lifetime home in camps

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the Indochina refugees may never leave the temporary camps set up for them, John Eisenhower, chairman of President Ford's advisory committee on refugees, said Friday.

Eisenhower, son of the late president, said in an interview on CBS-TV that some refugees may spend the rest of their lives in the camps because of security and literacy problems.

In the same broadcast, CBS also said L. Dean Brown resigned Thursday night as head of the Interagency Task Force which handles the refugee resettlement program. Brown was succeeded by Julia Taft, a deputy assistant secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, CBS said.

"There's going to be a certain number that you're almost never going to be able to parole, especially this — the group that came out after the American-sponsored refugees left, that 70,000 people that made their way out on their own on sam-bars. Among that group, you'll probably find a few more people you can't do much with," Eisenhower said.

Asked what would happen to those refugees, Eisenhower said: "I think

Viets shut embassy — 'past gone'

WASHINGTON (AP) — With little ceremony and no fanfare, the Vietnam embassy has closed its doors, leaving its 40 employees sad, jobless and with an uncertain future.

"All the past is gone," said Miss Nguyen Thi Phuong Dung, the second secretary and political officer. "Now we must prepare for a new life. We have to think about earning a living."

Miss Phuong Dung, a strikingly beautiful woman and a former Fulbright scholar, said the embassy closing was "like half of your life dying."

"It's an unusual experience," she said. "When I was young, I didn't know what dying was like. I know now. You emerge from the grave and see everything differently. You see people differently."

Polish trawler fined $350,000, departs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The seized Polish fishing trawler Kalmar left San Francisco for the open sea Friday night, escorted by a Coast Guard cutter, after its owners agreed to pay $350,000 to avoid confiscation for violating U.S. territorial waters.

Only a handful of people watched the Kalmar leave. Most of them appeared to be reporters and photographers. Many from the crew of 79 peered from the rails at the city they were forbidden to set foot upon during their enforced stay here.

The 2,600-ton "fishing factory" let go its lines at 6:24 p.m., backed smartly out of Pier 9 assisted by tugboats, put the Golden Gate Bridge on its bow and churned off toward the setting sun. The cutter Point Meyer escorted the vessel out of the channel.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert F. Peckham approved what U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. said was a compromise settlement reached between the government and the representatives of Odra Deep Sea Fishing Co. of Swinoujscie, Poland, a state entity.

Peckham dismissed both a criminal complaint and a civil complaint against the Kalmar, unofficially valued at between $4 million and $5 million, and ordered that the vessel be released forthwith.

Attorneys Lester Clark and Alexander Karst said the vessel, seized last Saturday for allegedly fishing 10.8 miles from the California coast, would leave the Port of San Francisco within a few hours.

The $350,000 payment is to be made by 4:30 p.m. Wednesday in the form of three checks, Karst said. The checks will include one to the U.S. Marshals Service for keeper's fees and another for wharfage fees, both minor amounts, and the balance for the U.S. Treasury.

The judge was told that a letter guaranteeing payment had been received from Balfour Guthrie & Co. Ltd., ship's agents.

The compromise agreement said that the parties hold that the payment of money "does not constitute an admission" that Odra, the Kalmar or its master are liable for the U.S. claims against the ship, or that the ship or its master violated any U.S. laws, including the country's 12-mile fishing zone.

The parties also stipulated that the Odra vessel and her master expressly denied all charges of any violation of U.S. law.

Clark had contended in previous court appearances that the trawler was 12.5 miles offshore when it was seized and that its three radar systems were in good working order.

The 270-foot vessel had a catch of several hundred tons of hake when it was taken into custody by the U.S. Coast Guard. It is part of a Russian-Polish fishing fleet which has been operating off the American Coast for several weeks.

Brown supports logging exemption

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Brown administration announced its support Friday for legislation exempting the logging industry from meeting environmental impact rules through June 1, 1976.

The new position was unveiled by Norman Hill, a Resources Agency spokesman, who said his agency now backs a timber industry-backed bill by Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka.

Hill's remarks to the Assembly Ways and Means Committee followed months of protests from logging industry spokesmen, who said the Brown administration-backed rules were hiking industry unemployment.

The legislation would dump the environmental impact requirements for loggers until June 1 next year. But logging plans would have to be filed with the state by Jan. 1.

IN THE interim, the loggers still will have to file timber harvest plans specifying how they will log a particular area.

"Our position is the Forest Practices Act (which requires the harvest plans) is sufficiently strong enough to do whatever is needed," Hill said.

He added the state Board of Forestry is working on regulations that would toughen the 1973 act's provisions.

The committee decided to send Collier's bill back for another hearing before the Assembly Resources and Land Use Committee because it has been amended. But it is expected to pass that committee.

IN AN interview after the hearing, Collier said he picked up Brown administration support when it was agreed he would drop a provision exempting the Redwood Creek area from the bill's effect.

Claire Dedrick, the Resources Agency secretary, earlier this year adopted the environmental impact regulations after a Humboldt County court ruling on a Redwood Creek case.

Mrs. Dedrick said the ruling meant the state had to require loggers to answer environmental impact questions before going ahead with a cut.

BUT THE logging industry reacted angrily, saying the Brown administration was adding to the economic woes loggers faced because of the recession and traditional winter weather problems.

Nev. county irked by snow job

NEVADA CITY (AP) — Nevada County has had it up to, well, 20 feet, with those who fool with Mother Nature.

The Board of Supervisors, in a resolution, wants a federally funded cloud-seeding project halted because it has been too successful.

The snowpack at higher elevations of the Sierra is reported to be about 20 feet deep.

The project director reported that the program increased snow fall from 10 to 15 per cent. It is designed to improve the watershed.

GARDENING

CAMELLIAS.....don't let them get dry!

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Gardeners sometimes unthinkingly let camellias get too dry as the buds are forming and developing. The Nuccio brothers, famous for introducing new camellias as well as azaleas, implore garden lecturers and writers not to let this happen because such condition, followed by near drowning them in order to give them sufficient water shocks the developing flower buds. It doesn't cause them to dry and drop off, but it can affect the blooming.

Corrugated-like leaves indicates aphids were left undisturbed on the leaf buds while they were developing and sucked the sap, leaving crippled leaf buds, hence the foliage distortion. Spray such plants at the first sign of aphids.

Younger camellias would grow faster if gardener fertilized them about every six weeks through August.

THERE are numerous camellias that are lovely and desirable for container plants, or in a shade garden. Shade garden doesn't mean the coldest, dampest, darkest part of such a garden. Camellias grow happier where they can get several hours of morning or late afternoon sun. They can be planted from containers any time of the year.

Our favorite camellia is Mrs. Carolyn Tuttle a mid-season blooming variety. It is a peony form, with blossoms a bit larger than one of the older varieties, the peony form Debutante camellia, which is a lovely pink. Mrs. Tuttle's flowers are a deeper and richer coral. The comparison between the two would be that Mrs. Tuttle is more like a vivacious red head,

JOBS FOR GARDENERS

Gardener doesn't have to wait until December to plant bare root roses. There are many lovely varieties one can find in containers at most nurseries. Luckier still, you can get the 1975 AARS roses!

Arizona is a grandiflora rose with fragrant gold-copper flowers. Oregon is a hybrid tea, and the first deep yellow award winner in 13 years.

Rose Parade is a true floribunda in full growth with clusters of richly fragrant coral-pink blooms highlighted with shades of peach.

Plant hole should be double the size of the root ball and then filled with water. Rose is set out after the water has disappeared into the soil. The hole soil should be mixed half and half with an organic amendment. Scatter a cupful of bone meal or flower-fruit fertilizer in the hole and mix with prepared soil. Put a layer of prepared soil over it and set out the rose. Soil must be firmed well, then slowly soak down.

Bergenia-Saxifrage cordifolia, a perennial plant with water lily-like leaves that has pink flowers from late winter into spring, is one of fewer plants that will start from cutting planted right into the soil.

whereas Debutante is blondish.

GROWING a hanging basket fuchsia or one in a container can become a problem which may not be readily recognizable by the gardener because he doesn't know what the symptom may be.

One of the main problems could be due to frequent waterings, yet not sufficient amount of water to thoroughly saturate the whole root ball when the plant is watered.

All the gardener needs to do is to notice how quickly the water disappears into the soil. Water that immediately gushes through that planting medium means the material isn't firm enough to retain the water (briefly) before soaking in. That planting should be finger-firmed well, but not tamped down with the end of a trowel.

Thereafter plant doesn't need to be watered daily or twice a day during the hot weather, providing it is growing in shade or filtered shade.

Fuchsias still love shower baths, but no lingering ones where the soil is kept constantly moist, which tends to build up the so-called alkali condition.

FUCHSIAS in a shade garden furnish the bright and gay colors of summer and fall flowers after the camellias and azaleas have finished blooming. Fuchsia blooming periods are similar to those of roses in that fuchsias too continue producing new growth followed by succeeding crops of flowers.

An attractive combination planting is that of low-growing and sempiflorens begonias in front of the taller fuchsias. The contrasting blossoms provide a neon-light effect, brightening up a shade garden. Both kinds of plantings require a good, well-drained loamy soil containing organic materials mixed with the existing soil. The organic materials retain moisture longer, help loosen heavy soil and provide a sponge-like body substance to retain the moisture, also the fertilizer.

Club Notes

The Long Beach Garden Club is planning a bus trip to Quail Gardens, Asper's Protea Nursery and Tropic World Nursery, all in the Escondido area, May 29. The bus will leave from the parking lot of the Glendale Federal Savings and Loan Association in Los Altos Center at 9 a.m. and return that afternoon at about 5 p.m. The trip will cost $5 and is open to the public. There are a few seats still available.

For reservations, call Ann Cook, 597-4683.

The Naples Islands Garden Club will meet June 9 at 1 p.m. at Gloria Dei Lutheran Church in Naples. Eunice Antosik, an authority on flower arrangement, will be guest speaker. Members and their friends are invited to bring containers and plant materials for the workshop.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

MAY 26-JUNE 1, 1975

It's June, and pleasant sights salute the eyes.

Patch up leaky roofs now... Charles Lindbergh married Ann Morrow, May 26, 1925... Last quarter of the moon June 1... Memorial Day May 26... Average length of days for the week, 13 hours, 4 minutes... Golden Gate bridge opened May 27, 1937... Marines took Okinawa May 30, 1945... Lincoln Memorial dedicated in Washington, D.C. May 30, 1922... A bright eye indicates curiosity; a black eye too much.

Old Farmer's Riddle: What is lengthened by being cut at both ends? (Answer below.)

Ask the Old Farmer: Why the word blue in the old saying "once in a blue moon"? H. D., Beaver Falls, Pa.

There are two schools of thought. One states that under certain conditions the moon can and does appear to be blue in color. Our notion is that this could be caused by a mild eclipse, but maybe not. The other argues that the moon actually resembles a pale, pained face, almost smiling, but, from some cause or other, this appearance can change until the face looks sad, or "blue."

Have them? You can search for them by placing the spot between two dropped 72-inch rods, then spreading the rods with a bar and the whole into the darning towel where it can be washed out and the rods used again.

Car sales hit 14-year low

DETROIT (AP) — U. S. car sales during mid-May were the worst in 14 years for the period, although up slightly from early month results, according to figures released by the four auto companies on Friday.

Industry sales were 180,423 during May 10-20, down 28 per cent from a year ago. The daily selling rate of 22,500 cars, was the lowest for the period since 1961 when the rate was just over 19,000.

Still, the rate was more than 20 per cent above early May levels. Generally, the mid-May results run about 19 per cent better than those of the first 10 days.

ANALYSIS said the better than average pickup in the second part of the month indicates the sales downside has halted.

GM vice president Mack Worden called the GM sales performance encouraging, and noted last year GM mid-May sales were bolstered by dealer incentive programs.

While domestic car makers saw sales slump due to higher gasoline prices and the recession, foreign cars with better gas mileage continued to sell well.

General Motors mid-May sales slid 30.8 per cent from a strong period last year, while Chrysler Corp. reported deliveries declined 32 per cent. Ford Motor Co. was off 20 per cent and American Motors 14 per cent.

For the year-to-date, domestic car sales are off 19.6 per cent from last year's weak levels and are traveling at the slowest pace in 14 years.

GM to introduce smallest U.S. car

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. announced plans Friday to introduce America's smallest car during the next model year, stepping up the battle with importers for the American mini-car market.

GM did not say how much the auto would cost, nor what it will be called. It has been reported the GM minicar may get about 40 miles per gallon in highway driving, but GM released no data.

According to Environmental Protection Agency results released at the start of the model year, the Datsun B-210 now gets the best fuel consumption at 39 miles per gallon, the Chevrolet Vega gets the best of any domestic car at 29 miles per gallon.

Meanwhile, the four U.S. car companies said that all their plants will operate next week, with Ford reopening six factories where operations were suspended this week.

It's small consolation for 162,625 workers on indefinite layoffs because most car plants are producing at far below capacity due to sagging sales. Some 183,000 of the industry's 712,000-person blue-collar workforce were laid off this week.

GM, facing its stockholders Friday, had the future on its corporate mind. "General Motors will bring to the market in the coming model year, a new American-built car of a new size — smaller, more modern, and more fuel-efficient than any being built in America today," said GM Chairman Thomas Murphy.

Murphy said the minicar is part of GM's effort "to fulfill our commitment to achieve by 1980 a sales-weighted average improvement in gas mileage of 53 per cent over our 1974 cars."

Unofficially known as the Chevette, the car is expected to be about the size of the VW Rabbit, and larger than the tiny Civic. It will be a version of a car GM now sells in several countries, including Great Britain and Brazil.

The car is expected to have a 94-inch wheelbase, compared with the GM subcompact Vega's 87-inch wheelbase. Industry sources say the new car will be 17 inches shorter than the Vega overall and weigh 400 pounds less than the 2,446-pound Vega.

Freeway completion asked

BAKERSFIELD (UPI) — A contingent of Fresno civic and local government officials appeared before a California Highway Commission meeting here Friday to urge "highest priority" be given to completion of a freeway complex in Fresno.

Fresno Mayor Ted C. Wills, who headed the Fresno group, asked the Commission to honor a "20-year obligation" to finish the partially completed freeway system through the heart of Fresno.

Estimated cost of finishing the Fresno system, which includes Freeway 41 all the way across Fresno and interchanges, has ballooned from $29 million to $63 million.

Drivers reminded of limit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb appealed Friday for motorists to observe the "life-saving, fuel-saving" 55 mph national speed limit during the three-day Memorial Day weekend.

Last year, Zarb said, Memorial Day traffic accidents claimed 390 lives. He said this was 149 fewer than in 1973, and attributed the decline to the nationwide speed limit for interstate highways enacted by Congress during the Arab oil embargo.

"I have noted recently a trend among some Americans to disregard the 55 mph law," Zarb said in a statement.

"I would hope that reflection on last year's lowered Memorial Day casualties will underscore the necessity for everyone to fully comply with the provisions of this life-saving, fuel-saving measure."

Zarb also said his agency will present awards next week to the highway patrols of California and Wyoming for "their continuing efforts to implement innovative and effective measures to enforce the 55 mph speed limit."

FEA officials said lower speeds are saving an estimated 100,000 barrels of oil a day. They said twice that saving could be realized "if every car, bus and truck in America keeps its speed under 55."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON Forecast for SUNDAY

Your birthday today: You're apt to depart from your career plans this year and branch out into profitable sidelines. You become optimistic since spiritual growth is assured now. Relationships drift; in many ways you're more alone than appearances indicate. Today's natives are versatile, have a natural ability for translating theories into practice, exert leadership in the arts and academic fields.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Be alert and meet people on their own terms. No one is going to have the whole story, let alone be willing to share it. Outdoor sports and pastimes are favored.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Money or its distribution can be a minor problem today. Study health care and try to drop bad habits.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Once you make up your mind what you want to do, be clear and concise in setting up details as to times and places. Choose your companions selectively. Expect romantic, sentimental moods.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Some work must be done on Sunday. If it's your turn, do a reasonable minimum without complaint. Return to home base and record your finances accurately.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): The greatest good this Sunday comes from small moves to keep family life smooth. Pride gets in the way, particularly when money questions are raised.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It's a variable Sunday. Some of your activities are lively and thriving, but your financial transactions are at best speculative. Spend nothing without first seeing what you're getting.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get out with an old friend and explore something beyond your regular routes. Give relatives a chance to discuss matters without listening; don't worry about their opinions.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Pursuing glory and pleasure brings doubtful results. Avoid bickering; money is a sore spot to begin with. Stay put and rest; attend to your own needs.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have a creative idea to try out. Others disagree with you about what seems to be the only thing to do. Find a compromise if possible, then stick to it.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You're in need of all the public confidence you can inspire. Persist in your search for new contacts. Your community can use volunteer work and a little of your money.

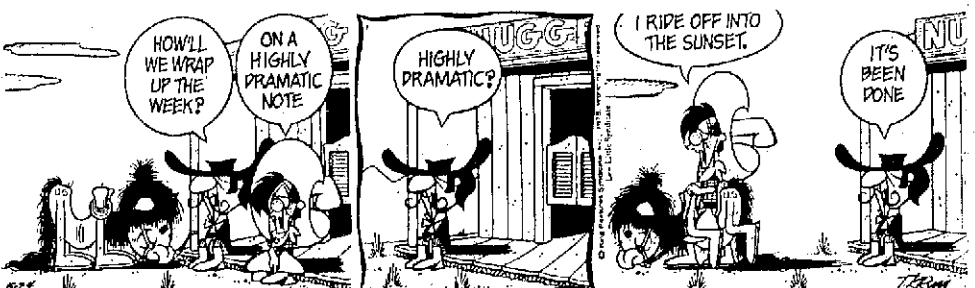

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Social progress is uneven but generally positive. Be ready to assist in public events. Make friends among those of similar views. Find or give a small party tonight.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Continue existing projects and some business planning, but make the most of this Sunday's opportunity for spiritual growth. Competitive games outside are favored.

Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle:

Justice shifts stand on new election law

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a policy shift, the Justice Department Friday decided to review its defense of the new federal election law after a top official questioned the law's constitutionality.

A spokesman said Solicitor General Robert H. Bork, who argues the government's cases before the Supreme Court, got Atty. Gen. Edward Levi to agree to prepare briefs in opposition to the new law which was passed in the wake of the Watergate campaign-money scandals. The law establishes the Election Commission to enforce campaign laws, limits federal campaign donations and spending and provides partial public financing for presidential campaigns.

The spokesman said at first that the department would file briefs in court arguing on both sides of a pending lawsuit that attacks every major provision of the law. Later the same spokesman said opposition briefs were being prepared but that no

If you've ever tried to wade through the fine print in a contract and given up somewhere between the "whereas" and the "hereby," cheer up. Legal documents are getting easier to read.

Prodded by government and consumer activists, some companies are moving to simplify documents like loan or credit agreements and insurance policies.

They are taking out the lawyers' mumbo jumbo and substituting plain English, personal pronouns and shorter sentences.

One of the first firms to change its style was New York's First National City Bank, the nation's second-largest commercial bank.

Radiation limit cut proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Environmental Protection Agency Friday proposed giving Americans 20 times the protection they now receive from atomic radiation, estimating this could prevent 1,000 or more cases of cancer or genetic damage over the next quarter-century.

The proposed new standards, outlined at a news conference by EPA director Russell Train, would apply to emissions throughout the nuclear fuel cycle, and cover for the first time some radioactive materials which can persist in the environment for generations.

Current federal regulations set the safe dosage for an individual at a maximum of 500 millirems for the entire body and 1,500 millirems for the thyroid gland, exclusive of that from medical treatment and natural background radiation.

THE proposed new rules would limit this to 25 millirems for the body and 75 for the thyroid. A millirem is one one-thousandth of a rem, the basic radiation measurement unit.

"The proposed standards would establish an important new precedent in radiation protection," Train said. "Heretofore, radiation standards have been based primarily upon consideration of maximum annual exposure of individuals."

"These proposed standards are based on an assessment of the impact of long-lived radioactive materials... which includes all the future impact of an environmental release of such materials for all present and future populations that may be exposed."

"We estimate that the reductions in the number of potential cases of cancer and serious genetic effects achieved by the proposed standards by controlling releases of these materials over the next 25 years would be in excess of 1,000."

The rules would apply to all sources of radiation, rather than just to reactors at electricity generating plants.

They would set tough limits on emission of several radioactive materials with half-lives ranging up to almost 17 million years — meaning that during this period they would lose only half their atoms.

'Dry Ban' complaint dampened

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Dry Ban" deodorant may really be wet, but consumers are not misled to believe it is dry, the Federal Trade Commission ruled Friday. One commissioner called the case a waste of the agency's time.

The agency dismissed a complaint against Bristol-Myers, the manufacturer, and its advertising agency, dating back to a series of Dry Ban television commercials in 1969 and 1970.

The original complaint alleged the ads were deceptive because they indicated the spray was dry when in reality it wetted the skin just like any other spray.

Commissioner Mayo J. Thompson, in a concurring opinion in the decision, attacked the FTC for spending so much time and money on such a frivolous subject.

"EVEN if one believes in the power of television to convince the consumer that wet is really dry the first time around, and thus its power to sell each potential customer one can of the product in question, it would presumably strain the credibility of even the most enthusiastic of TV supporters to believe that repeat sales could be won," said Thompson, who is leaving the FTC next fall to head the Texas A&M former students association.

THE NEW contract, in a "Late Charge" section: "If I fall more than 10 days behind in paying an installment, I promise to pay a late charge of 5 per cent of the overdue installment, but no more than $5. However, the sum total of late charges on all installments can't be more than 2 per cent of the total of payments or $25, whichever is less."

(The spelling of the word "installment" has been changed, adding the second "l.")

In the old form, the person applying for the loan is "the undersigned;" First National City is "the Bank."

The new form says: "In this note, the words I, me, mine and my mean each and all of those who signed it. The words you, your and yours mean First National City Bank." (The pronouns are in bold face type.)

The old agreement was printed on green paper; the printing was black; the paragraphs were long; and there were no headings to separate sections of the note — those dealing with late charges, security and default, for example — are set off with black titles at the left of the page.

MANY OF the long words and complicated sentences were simply a case of lawyers "slavishly following form," Felsenfeld said.

Church 'adopts' preacher

Plans are under way to sponsor another family.

Lambert said that the 39-year-old Vietnamese is a self-reliant and well-educated man who, despite of some difficulty with English, will do well, perhaps as a minister to other refugees.

Although many churches are helping the refugees, Lambert believes his is the first to actually sponsor a family. The church is located at 9603 E. Belmont St., Bellflower.

The Rev. Alexander Lambert, pastor, said that sponsorship of a family requires $750 to $1,000. The collection plates on two Sundays brought in $1,562 above the usual offerings.

The solution
Religion Editor:

The Long Beach pastor's recent comments are wrong: Love is not the problem, but the solution.

Throughout all levels of animal life, coexistence with one's peers is inversely proportional to the number of those peers in a given area. The same is true of human beings as evidenced by the divorce, violent crime, and general indifference levels in higher population areas.

The now fashionable love that sprang from the 1960's flower children may have had roots in genuineness but has long since become a phony facade to cover individual inner guilt at his own lack of genuine concern for his fellowmen.

Since the word love has been stretched, bleached, and watered down in so many ways maybe we need to narrow the definition of Love. Love, to Christ, was infinite, un hypocritical selflessness and concern for others. To borrow a phrase, "What the world needs now is Love."

Repeal act
Religion Editor:

You have asked for opinions on the Consenting Adult Sex Bill that was passed by the Assembly, so here it goes.

Am I to believe as a Christian and an American Citizen the interpretation of this bill legalizes:

1. Having sexual relations with anyone: father, mother, brother, sister, etc.?
2. Sexual relations with animals?
3. Homosexuality?
4. Adultery?

Can we honestly call ourselves Californians or would Sodom and Gomorrah be better? We took prayer out of schools, now we want God out of the United States.

I do not believe God's laws are ancient, we may change but he never will. For those that read the Bible, and those that should; Leviticus 20, Colossians 3, and Galatians 5:17-21 spell it out very plainly, not to mention Romans 1. Anyone using their God-given conscience would know this is wrong.

Christ tells us to love one another, but not this way! I pray that Californians will search their souls and let's get this bill REPEALED IMMEDIATELY!!!!

"Whereas, the legislature of California has responded to the voice of the people and has initiated and passed a bill removing all legal constraints upon sexual conduct between consenting adults in private...

Therefore, be it resolved that the delegates at the 1975 Annual Meeting of the Pacific Southwest District, representing Unitarian Universalists throughout the area of Southern California Southern Nevada and Arizona, commend the legislature for its adoption of the bill and endorse its intent, the furtherance and perpetuation of individual freedom."

Wycliffe taking Bible to ends of earth

Christ's frontiersmen

Go ye into all the world; and preach the gospel to every living creature. — Mark 16:15.

By MARK CLUTTER

What kind of man is a professional translator? One envisions a pudgy, professorial type with silvery hair, horn-rimmed glasses, a pipe and an indoors complexion. He spends his time reading and writing in a book-filled study.

That's not what professional translators are like if they work for the worldwide Wycliffe Bible Translators, 19891 Beach Blvd., Huntington Beach.

They are more like U.S. Marines — tough-muscled, gung-ho, disciplined, "Semper Paratus." Like Marines they go — men and women — to the far corners of the earth. And sometimes they must show courage that would be beyond that of many a Leatherneck.

They are all well educated and specially trained. They plunge into savage jungles or deserts or arctic wastes. Their pay is never large and often inadequate. They may die of disease — or poison arrows!

Why do bright young people act so foolishly?

Just for one reason. They want to conquer the world for Christ.

To do this they want to teach everybody to read and write.

First, the natives must learn to hear and read the Bible. And then they must learn to write their own ideas. And hopefully they will learn to talk, read and write languages like English, Spanish and Chinese.

Harold L. Goodall, deputy director, discussed some of the problems.

TRANSLATION of related languages like English and French can be difficult, but how do you go about translation with a remote tribe in the

Peruvian jungle? First, you must study their alphabet. Some languages have only a few sounds, some many. And some languages depend on tone, almost to the point of singing. In Mexico a tribe has a whistle language in which complex ideas can be communicated by whistling.

The Wycliffe members

— they seldom use the word "missionaries" — are all college graduates who have done postgraduate work in linguistics. They are taught methods of learning to understand other languages, but they can't be taught the unknown languages. That's what they have to learn for themselves. Often it takes many years.

They are also taught the arts of survival. A camp in southern Mexico sounds very much like a cruel boot camp. They learn to live in the Arctic or desert in other camps.

And they learn some basic medicine and agriculture and other skills.

"A few drop out," Goodall said. "Not many. This is a lifetime commitment, although not everyone stays in the field."

Many stay for many years. The language of a remote tribe can't be learned overnight.

There is also a supply problem, and Wycliffe has in North Carolina a special school for aviation and radio in wilderness situations.

Wycliffe is big business. There are 3,500 members at home and in the field.

Only a few of the members are ordained ministers. They are not trying to teach any one brand of Christianity. They are not trying to make proper Baptists or Methodists who eat with forks. They respect native cultures, but they realize that civilization in some form or other will reach the natives. They want it to be Christian.

"THERE ARE 6,000 known languages in the world," Goodall said. "We have translated some portion of the Bible in 1,500. There are 2,000 with which translators have not worked."

Russia is a challenge. "The Russians are very good linguists and have studied their numerous languages," he said. "Our problem is how to get the Bible into those languages."

Wycliffe has the year 2000 as the target date for mastering all the world's languages and getting at least portions of the Bible into printed form.

This month four new New Testaments were produced — three in New Guinea languages and one in a Filipino language.

HOW TO print Bibles in exotic languages is a bit of a problem. Usually our Roman alphabet is used, but there are many sounds that cannot be expressed by our 26 letters, so other techniques must be invented. The books are printed in large type.

Wycliffe was started about 45 years ago by Wm. Cameron Townsend, who went to Central America to distributed Spanish Bibles. He discovered that a huge Indian tribe didn't know Spanish and couldn't read. So he did something about it.

And that gave him the dream of the world-wide effort in communication. He is the general director and active in the work.

Most of the nations have either home divisions or field branches.

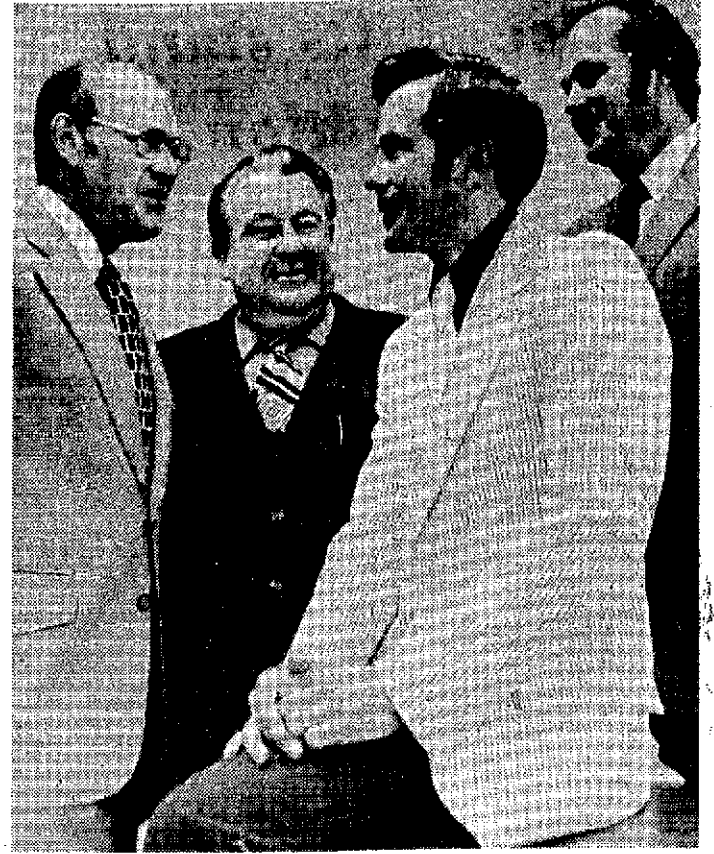

Any young, college-educated Christian who is fascinated with language and adventure and who doesn't mind a bit of hardship and poverty might look into Wycliffe. Volunteers are needed.

SOMEONE said: "You missionaries make me sick! Why force civilization on a people so unspoiled and happy? Why not leave 'em alone?"

Townsend replied: "I think, my friend, you've been no closer to jungle Indians than the movies.

If you could sit down with them, as I have, and hear them tell in their own tongues the woes that haunt them through witchcraft, superstition, fear and strife; listen to mothers tell of being forced to strangle their newborn babies because of some evil omen; see old folks abandoned to die because they had become a burden; or sense the hatreds bred in them by generations of white men who took advantage of their ignorance to exploit them, steal their lands, ravage their women and ruthlessly shoot them down — well then, my friend, you just might change your mind about Indians as a quaint people living lives of idyllic happiness."

The Wycliffe Bible Translators take their name from John Wycliffe, a 13th century English priest, aristocrat, theologian, philosopher, politician and "heretic" who is best remembered for first rendering the Bible into English.

Elected

These men were elected to head the Long Beach Ministerial Association this week. From left: the Rev. K. Dean Echols, East Side Christian Church, secretary; the Rev. Raymond W. Moore, Leisure World Community Church, vice president; the Rev. Bruce J. Talbert, First Congregational Church, treasurer, and (in foreground) Dr. James S. Flora, First Church of the Brethren, president.

Groundbreaking at First Baptist

Sunday will be a proud day for First Baptist Church, 18th Street and Pine Avenue.

At 12:15 p.m. after worship service the ground will be broken across the street for a 13-story, 200-unit apartment building for residents 62 years of age or older.

All apartments will have one bedroom, a living room, full kitchens and baths and private balconies or patios. The first floor will provide recreational and social areas.

The $5,762,000 facility will be built and operated under the federal government's Elderly Housing Program.

The rent will be about $143 per month including all utilities except telephone. The residents must be under the maximum income of $6,750 for singles and $7,695 for couples.

Doty and Associates of Long Beach have served as consultants. The architectural services were provided by Orgren, Juarez and Givas, Sacramento. Hunt Construction, Sacramento, is the general contractor.

Barbara White, executive director of the Communicators Social & Charity Club is sponsoring a dinner and Gospel show in behalf of the Antioch Baptist Church, 1535 Gundry Ave. at the Petroleum Club June 21 at 6 p.m.

THE MEANING OF SUCCESS

That man is a success who has lived well, laughed often and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who leaves the world better than he found it whether by a perfect poem or a rescued soul; who never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who looked for the best in others and gave the best he had.

People and ideas

Smoke signals

By MARK CLUTTER
Religion Editor

Sometimes a specialized newspaper writer feels a bit lonely even though he is surrounded by people. A religion writer, for example, knows few of his peers. He wonders about what they are writing about religion in Biloxi, Keokuk and Syracuse. And he wonders about what kind of men and women are doing that work.

Now and then we get a few smoke signals from each other. Here are a few quotes from the news letter of the Religion News-writers Association. They were collected by William Reed of the Nashville, Tennessee.

"LOOKING FOR a way to jazz up the Sunday services at your church?"

"How about taking all prospective adult members, stripping them nude, smearing them with oil and then dunking them in a river... That ceremony has a pretty respectable Christian history." That was the beginning of a feature by the religion editor of the State Journal, Madison, Wis. It does arouse curiosity, doesn't it?

"CHURCHES in downtown Phoenix are dying. Many would be dead tomorrow if they relied on area residents to keep them alive, clergymen say," writes Gene Luptak of the Arizona Republic.

Most pastors in downtown Long Beach would disagree. While downtown churches here have their problems they look to the future with hope. And they declare their hope with impressive building programs. First Baptist will break ground Sunday for a 13-story apartment building for the elderly. First Congregational completed such a project not long ago. Covenant Presbyterian and First Methodist built new churches a few years ago. The churches may be the healthiest element in downtown Long Beach.

THE PHOENIX editor in a lighter mood wrote a headline: "Wailing Babies in Church Test Patience of Preachers." He commented: "One of the first things a minister learns after ordination is not to trust anyone under 30 months."

"IN SUBURBAN America, the face of sin is changing," comments Wilma Supik of the Hackensack, N.J., Record. It would be interesting to know what she thinks about sin in the suburbs — but perhaps it would be more fun to think it out for ourselves.

"IDEALLY, a minister should be a combination businessman, diplomat, fund raiser, author, orator, social worker, psychologist, politician and theologian. Mix a bit of the magician, babysitter, advice to the lovelorn columnist, and a touch of the foolhardy, if a person thinks he or she can successfully fulfill all these roles while shepherding his flock, writes Lee Kelly of the St. Petersburg, Fla., Times.

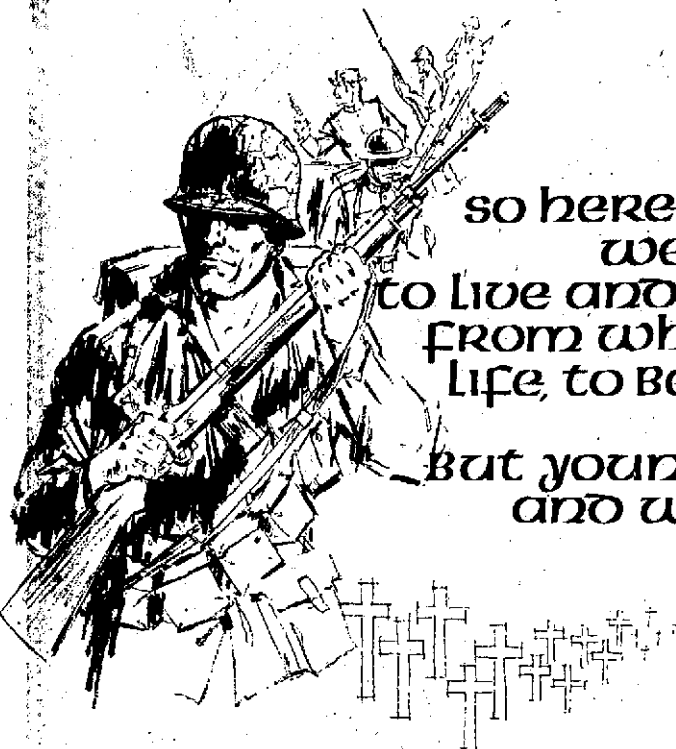

Here's a word of advice to any minister who has all these talents: Never, never stop to think how rich you would be if you had entered the business world!

"SOMETIMES in a bitter and rocky marriage, one party's threat to stay may have more impact than a threat to leave," observes James E. Adams of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He was writing about the bitter quarrel in the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod.

The Missouri Synod will make news, perhaps hot news, when it holds its 51st convention in Anaheim July 4-11. Those Lutherans take church business very seriously as is evidenced by their Convention Workbook, which contains 504 large pages of eye-straining small type.

PAYOLA can be a problem of religion editors with tender consciences. The Religious Public Relations Council wanted to give Jim Adams of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch a Merit Award. He refused with thanks, saying, "We strive for impartial journalism in covering news of religion. Our efforts may well render service to organized religion" and "advance the spiritual life of the nation." We hope so. But we believe it unwise to participate in an award which implies that such results — beneficial as they may be — are the primary goal of our religious coverage."

Memorial Day

By MARK CLUTTER

This country least but every country is clotted with human anguish. Remember that at your feasts. . . . Praise life! It deserves praise. But the praise of life that forgets the pain is as pebbles rattled in a dry gourd. — ROBINSON JEFFERS

Memorial Day was created as a solemn American holiday to honor the dead, especially those who died in battle.

It has become a long weekend holiday.

Perhaps this is fitting. The young fellows — most of them were very young — who died at Valley Forge and New Orleans and Shiloh and San Juan Hill and the Argonne and Iwo Jima and Korea and Vietnam and a thousand other fights were keen on holidays. They liked dancing and girls and drinks and big feeds and sports events and trips to the mountains or the beach. They would want us to be happy this weekend.

But we should also remember. These men were our sons and brothers and friends and forefathers. They went to death, chewing gum or tobacco, strutting a bit, dreaming of girls who were far away. And brave for a cause they could not really understand.

These kids helped shape all that is good in our America.

So let's enjoy ourselves today and Sunday and Monday. But know that you have a right to pleasure because other men earned you that right. We owe them something.

Poem by A. E. Housman, drawing by Erwin DeGroot, staff artist.

If anyone deludes himself by thinking he is serving God, when he has not learned to control his tongue, the service he gives is vain. — Jas. 1: 26.

How is it that thou canst see the speck of dust which is in thy brother's eye, and art not aware of the beam which is in thy own? — Mt. 7:3

Evangelist Maxine Bates

Recently I had lunch with an inspiring friend of mine, president of a large publishing house. John has an interesting habit of always drawing diagrams to illustrate points he is making. Indeed he draws them over all the paper he has with him, and when he runs out of paper, he is likely to draw diagrams on the tablecloth.

On this particular occasion in trying to get over an idea, John drew a diagram for me which pictured a huge mountain, and, beside it, a man very little in comparison. Then John said: "This mountain, which represents a difficult problem, goes down deep into the earth and way out wide to the right and way out wide to the left. This man is just an average fellow. The question is — How is this little man going to get on the other side of that huge mountain of a difficulty? How would you solve his problem? He is stymied."

Well, being a so-called expert at solving other people's problems I didn't hesitate a minute. "Oh, that's easy. He just goes around it — makes an end run so to speak."

"No," John said, "he can't. The mountain extends too far in that direction."

"Well, then, he just goes round the other way — a left end run."

"He can't," John told me. "It goes out too far on that side as well."

I thought harder. "He can scale the mountain and crawl over the top of it."

John promptly corrected me. "It's too steep. It can't be scaled even by an expert mountain guide."

"Ah, wrong again," John answered. "It's too thick. He can't get through. It would be a futile effort. So, you see, we've reached an impasse."

At this point I was stumped and asked John to tell me how the man could get to the other side.

"Of course, there's a way," he assured me. "The answer is in that man's brain. What he must do is to think. When he does that he begins to grow. And he grows and grows until he is so tall in his mind that in effect he is taller than the mountain. He becomes bigger than the problem. Then instead of looking up at it in defeat, he looks down upon it in victory."

Todd barely escapes doctors' impeachment try

By AL MURRELL
Staff Writer

The medical staff of Torrance Memorial Hospital Friday night came within one vote of initiating an impeachment action against Dr. Malcolm C. Todd, president of the American Medical Association.

Memorial Chief of Staff Dr. Leonard Berman broke a 38-38 deadlock, saying he had enough problems.

Several doctors at the staff meeting said that the vote would have been unanimous if Dr. Donald Costley, vice chief of staff who made the motion, had changed it from impeachment to one of censure.

Costley refused, saying,

"He made a very irresponsible statement. A total incompetent is representing us and should be impeached."

Costley was referring to an interview with Independent, Press-Telegram Medical Science Editor Ben Zinser which appeared in Thursday's editions.

Todd, a Long Beach surgeon, had said that the striking anesthesiologists should return to work at once.

Many of those who voted against the impeachment motion said they felt it was not the Memorial staff's position to initiate the action.

The staff unanimously approved a motion to support "the effort of the physicians to correct the current inequities in medical liability insurance," stressing that it was a problem of all doctors, not just anesthesiologists.

They will join the six-day-old Southern California boycott of all but emergency surgeries Tuesday, as will South Bay Hospital of Redondo Beach and Little Company of Mary Hospital in Torrance.

More than half of the doctors who spoke at the meeting blamed attorneys for the high malpractice insurance rates.

Dr. William K. Wileman said, "It is time we stopped being blackmailed by the lawyers with threats of repercussions" over the doctors' boycott.

Costley said, "As it is now lawyers have an open season on us."

Another doctor said, "What we have to decide is whether we're to continue to be castrated by attorneys as we have."

Still another doctor attacked a measure by Sen. Peter Behr, R-Tiburon, which was signed into law by Gov. Brown Friday. The new law calls for formation of a malpractice insurance underwriting pool. The doctor said, "The anesthesiologists will have to roll it up and tell Brown where to put it."

"What we want is meaningful legislation," Costley said. He said the doctors want a reorganization of the State Board of Medical Examiners, a two-year statute of limitations on malpractice insurance lawsuits, a limit on the amount of malpractice claims and law to give the claimant at least 85 percent of his settlement.

Another doctor said that lawyer-contingency fees should be abolished.

The California congressman, a former FBI agent himself, said his subcommittee will "keep pressure on the FBI in a responsible way and help them to do a better job."

GI BILL

count to pay for the food stamps if the regular account runs dry before the supplemental bill is approved.

"WE'LL struggle through, I think," said Jerome Miles, Agriculture Department budget officer.

He said shutting off the flow of food stamps would present horrendous administrative and social problems and more expenses than would be justified, even though "there's more out there than we can pay for with the appropriations we now have."

"There's no indication Congress intends to terminate the food stamp program," Miles added.

But VA officials say they could be subject to imprisonment if they willfully exceeded their budget authority on the assumption that the supplemental appropriation for the GI benefits would be forthcoming. They indicated they are unwilling to take that chance even though some agencies have carried programs along briefly on that basis in the past.

They said the food stamp program operates under a different set of circumstances and accounting procedures.

The sticking point in the supplemental bill is $700 million for rehabilitation of the nation's railroads, which the Senate has insisted on and which the House has rejected just as emphatically.

That dispute was left unresolved Thursday night when the House was unable to muster a quorum because 16 too many members had already left for the 10-day recess.

Seniors offered financial advice

From Our L.A. Bureau

Volunteer retired business executives will give free financial counseling to senior citizens under a unique project scheduled to get under way countywide in June.

Supervisor Ed Edelman announced the project Friday, saying the program will be funded with a $15,000 grant from ACTION, the federal umbrella agency in charge of volunteer programs.

He said the initial grant is for one year, and that ACTION is considering allocating an extra $20,000 after July 1 to extend the program into the following year.

"Free financial counseling is desperately needed by many senior citizens who must live on extremely small fixed incomes, sometimes as little as $100 or $200 a month," Edelman said.

He said seniors also face complex financial issues such as determining what social security benefits are due them and what income tax and property tax exemptions they may claim.

He said as many as 50 counselors, volunteers from the fields of banking, insurance and accounting, will travel to county and city senior citizen centers and recreation centers to offer advice.

Details are as yet to be finalized. Edelman noted the program will operate at no cost to the county.

Paroled killer loses bid for new review of cases

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

Robert E. Williams, the 37-year-old parolee who spent nearly 20 years in prison after being convicted of two slayings in Long Beach and San Pedro, Friday was denied a new judicial review of his cases.

The ruling was handed down by Long Beach Superior Court Judge Elsworth M. Beam, to whom Williams had submitted an unusual writ of habeas corpus.

At the time the writ was filed, Williams—now a Long Beach resident—told newsmen he would voluntarily submit to hypnosis in an attempt to prove his innocence.

Williams was just 18 when he was arrested for the murder of Matt Manestar, a 54-year-old Harbor City motel owner, in January, 1956.

The young defendant reportedly admitted the slaying, then rescinded his confession. He ultimately was convicted of murder in Manestar's death and sent to prison.

While a Folsom inmate in 1958, Williams surprised authorities with a reported confession to a second slaying—the 1955 shooting death of Ralph Burgess, a 64-year-old Long Beach furniture salesman.

Reports from the prison indicated Williams subsequently asked the warden to tear up the new confession because it was a hoax—but that Williams knew details of the killing which had never been made public.

Williams was brought to trial, convicted of the Burgess slaying and sentenced to a second life prison term.

When Williams submitted the writ to Beam earlier this year he was free to walk into the courtroom and hand it to the clerk himself—a parolee after some 19 years in prison.

Williams also told the press at that time that he actually had confessed to the second slaying because he believed he could establish his innocence to both crimes once he came before the court.

In denying the writ, however, Beam ruled that the legal foundations for a review of the bizarre cases did not exist.

In a point-by-point response to the writ, the court noted that Williams had appealed both convictions, but that the Appeals Court had upheld them; and that Williams had given insufficient reasons for waiting 17 years to file the writ.

The writ also listed eight alleged errors by the courts during the trials and appeals. Beam ruled that "these assertions are unsupported by the record."

Most of the eight points in the writ actually had been raised before, during the appeal process, and had legally been answered at that time, noted the judge.

Ford sees Red on Portuguese as ally

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Ford said Friday that he will ask the leaders of the Atlantic alliance next week to consider whether Portugal's leftist government should remain a member.

"I don't see how you can have a Communist element significant in an organization that was put together and formed for the purpose of meeting a challenge by Communist elements from the east," the President told five foreign correspondents who interviewed him at the White House.

He said that it was a "very serious matter" that Marxists dominated the military-civilian government in Lisbon despite the poor showing of the Communist Party in the election of a constituent assembly last month. However, he stopped short of suggesting the ouster of Portugal from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The comments startled senior State and Defense Department officials who said they had understood U.S. policy on Portugal to be one of quiet observation of the leftward drift there.

Ford said that in general, the Western alliance seemed to be "on the brink of a leap forward" in world influence.

The 50-minute meeting with correspondents for news organizations in Britain, France, Italy and West Germany — telecast later in Europe — was regarded in the White House as an opportunity for Ford to set a reassuring tone for the journey he will begin Wednesday to Belgium, Spain, Austria and Italy.

By way of assurance to allies, Ford said that his decision to use combat forces to retrieve the merchant ship Mayaguez and her crew from the Cambodians should serve as "a clear, clear indication that we are not only strong but we have the will and the capability of moving" to meet challenges.

Acknowledging that an isolationist mood gripped much of the U.S. during and immediately after the war in Indochina, he asserted that there were encouraging signs in Congress and in the nation that "the American people are getting out from under the trauma of our problems in Vietnam" and that the U.S. "may be entering a new era" in which there would be no question about standing behind commitments to allies.

The interview, ranging across matters of concern to Europe, included the following points:

— Ford said he saw no contradiction between reassertion of the American will to use force where necessary and simultaneous pursuit of detente with the Communist powers. "We intend to be firm," he said, "but detente gives us an opportunity to be flexible."

— Although he forewarned getting involved in the vote in Britain June 5 on continued membership in the European Common Market, he said that Western economic influence would be "improved and strengthened" by British participation.

— Ford said that Spain, because of her location on the Mediterranean, "should be eased into a greater role in the over-all situation in Europe." But he said he was not certain that it was necessary to include her in NATO.

MIDEAST

warning of what could happen ... not a prediction but a cautioning."

Kissinger initially referred publicly in January to a possible U.S. military reaction to an embargo, saying in an interview that the United States might retaliate with force if it faced "strangulation" by another oil embargo.

Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger, in an interview published Sunday, said the United States would be "less tolerant of a renewed embargo than we were of the initial one in 1973."

Pressed on what he meant by less tolerant, Schlesinger replied: "...I'm not going to indicate any prospective reaction other than to point out there are economic, political or conceivably military measures in response."

But Ford, in an interview with five European journalists, disputed this view.

"We have sought throughout the Middle East to have a policy of cooperation rather than confrontation," he said in response to a question about Schlesinger's comments on the reaction to an embargo.

"If we put the emphasis on cooperation rather than confrontation, then you don't think about the potentiality that was mentioned by the secretary of defense."

"Since we do believe in cooperation, we don't consider military operations as a part of any policy planning that we have in mind," Ford said. "None of those plans that we have incorporate any military operations."

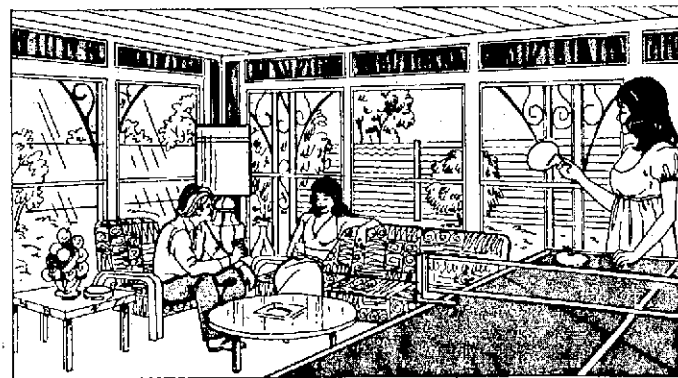

Asked whether the United States even has a contingency plan for military action to take over Middle East oil fields in the event of a new embargo, Ford replied: "Well, we put emphasis on cooperation, not confrontation, so we in effect rule out the other."

Despite repeated questioning, he refused to elaborate.

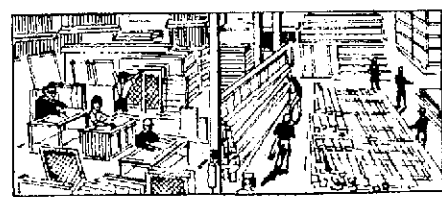

Ford said the United States has made "a tremendous effort to improve our relations with all Arab countries and we have continued our efforts to have good relations with Israel."

ECLIPSE

Lunar eclipses occur when the sun, earth and moon line up in such a way that the moon passes through the earth's cone-shaped shadow extending into space. That dark shadow is called the umbra.

According to astronomers at the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory, the main shadow zone is so large that the eclipse will be seen simultaneously over most of the hemisphere. Therefore, observers can see a lunar eclipse without having to travel to a special location.

Dr. Brian Marsden of the Smithsonian says lunar eclipses happen with relative frequency and have been well studied by professional astronomers.

"These eclipses are now primarily of interest to amateurs, but they are still fun to watch," Marsden says.

"There is some professional interest in observing dim stars that appear in the sky in the vicinity of the moon," he said. "These stars often are obscured by the light reflected by the moon."

The visible eclipse will begin at about midnight on the East. The curved shadow of the earth will creep across the moon from east to west until the satellite is totally obscured.

Even during totality, however, the moon does not vanish completely. Some sunlight bent through the earth's atmosphere hits the lunar surface, making long-exposure photography possible.

Since the atmosphere filters out the blue part of the solar spectrum, the light hitting the moon is mostly red and gives off a reddish glow.

Downing sizzles but Dodgers fizzle, 4-3

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

Every month or so the Dodgers ask Al Downing to start a game for them. Rather than complain and cause a furor over what he believes to be a grave injustice, he quietly pitches — and more often than not he pitches exceedingly well.

Friday night, with 53,033 noisy Cap Night fans jammed into Dodger Stadium, was one of those nights.

He didn't win—the St. Louis Cardinals did, 4-3—but Downing did a good deal more than anyone expected him to do in his first start of the 1975 season.

He worked seven strong innings, allowing St. Louis only three hits, and when he departed for a pinch hitter in the bottom of the seventh inning the Dodgers were ahead, 3-2.

But in the top of the eighth, with knuckleballer Charlie Hough working for the first time in nearly a week, the Cardinals pushed across two runs, the tying run produced by former Dodger Ted Sizemore.

"I thought Al pitched a super game," Sizemore said of Downing. "We thought he'd be wild since he hadn't pitched in awhile. But he had great command."

The defeat, coupled with Cincinnati's win, reduced the Dodgers' lead in the N.L. West to 4½ games over the Reds.

Acting manager Tom Lasorda agreed that Downing turned in a strong performance. "He was outstanding. He seemed to tire, but he certainly pitched a great game."

Downing always pitches well against the Cards. He's 7-0 against them, with a career earned run average of 2.25.

against St. Louis," he acknowledged, "but I've been lucky, too. There have been games in which I gave up four or five runs and we'd come back with six or seven."

Friday was not one of those nights.

After scoring 18 runs on 25 hits in their last two games against the Cubs, the Dodgers were restricted to seven hits, although two were home runs, by Steve Garvey and Jimmy Wynn. It was the Cannon's seventh homer, but his first in 10 days.

His smash tied the score, 2-2, in the sixth inning, and an inning later Dave Lopes broke the tie with a run-scoring single.

The inning had started impressively, with back-to-back singles by Joe Ferguson and Steve Yeager to place runners at first and third for pinch hitter Charlie Manuel. But when Manuel grounded into a swift double play, Ferguson unexplainably remained stationed on third.

The Cards purposely passed Bill Buckner, another pinch hitter. But Lopes salvaged the run with his single to center, extending his personal hitting streak to 11 games.

Barry has a field day as Warriors near title

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rick Barry, Golden State's marvelous scoring machine, drilled in 38 points Friday night, moving the Warriors to a 109-101 victory over the stunned Washington Bullets and onto the threshold of the National Basketball Association championship.

The Warriors, who have not won the league title since 1956 when they were in Philadelphia, can clinch the best-of-seven series Sunday afternoon at Landover, Md. The Warriors hold a 3-0 lead and no team in NBA playoff history ever has overcome such a huge deficit.

Despite his phenomenal scoring output, Barry confessed he was far from perfect.

"I don't know how great I shot," he said in the steamy, excited Warriors dressing room. "I haven't seen the statistics chart yet, but I know that I missed two easy layups." He also missed two free throws, his string of 22 consecutive successful foul shots ending in the first period when he failed to convert his seventh attempt of the game.

Barry sank 12 of 23 field goal attempts and 14 of 16 free throws. He also led both teams in assists with six and steals with five.

As usual, he discounted his own feat and talked about the team and the series.

"It's not over yet," he warned. "We have to win one more game. We'll have to go at them with the same determination and aggressiveness that we've shown so far."

Should the Warriors beat the Bullets Sunday, they would complete only the third sweep in NBA championship history. The others were Boston over Minnesota in 1959 and Milwaukee over the Baltimore Bullets in 1971.

The victory was the most lopsided in the series, the Warriors having to rally to win the first two games 101-95 and 92-

91. This time they were in front virtually all the way, never trailing by more than two points.

Barry, the leading scorer in the series with 98 points, an average of 32.7, got the Warriors off winging with a 19-point outburst in the first quarter. The 19 points were only two short of the single-quarter playoff record of 21 by Joe Fulks of the old Philadelphia Warriors against Chicago in 1947.

Barry had a sensational stretch, scoring 11 consecutive Golden State points, as the Warriors raced to a 24-16 lead.

By halftime, when the Warriors led 50-48, Barry had 25 points.

By DON MERRY

BOSTON—Nolan Ryan is human, after all.

Ryan was a pitcher who couldn't exercise control Friday night and the Boston Red Sox bedeviled him with three loud home runs

Angel of Day
MORRIS NETTLES doubled and singled in 6-1 loss to Boston.

en route to a 6-1 triumph over the Angels.

Coming off a streak in which he had permitted just one run in his last 26.2 innings, the struggling Ryan was lit up for homers by Bernie Carbo, Carl Yastrzemski and Dwight Evans and thus was burdened with his second loss in 10 decisions.

While all this was going on, the Red Sox were setting a speed trap for Dick Williams' whippers and three of them were snared.

Luis Tiant's talent for holding runners close and Tim Lincecum's arm combined to shoot down all three Angel runners who attempted to steal second.

Tiant, fighting a bout of intestinal flu, outpitched Ryan and evened his record at 5-5.

"If there was one thing that beat me besides Tiant it was my poor control," Ryan said in retrospect. "I was throwing with better velocity but it just wasn't going where I wanted it."

Yastrzemski, whose 11 hits in 29 career at-bats against Ryan indicate that he is not intimidated by the most famous arm in the league, perhaps had added incentive Friday night.

In the third inning, Yaz was obliged to bite the dust as a Ryan hummer sailed in high and tight.

Yastrzemski propped himself back up and lined a hard single to right. On his next trip to the plate in the fifth, he pounced on a Ryan fastball and drove a mammoth two-run homer into the Sox bullpen in right field.

"If going down bothers him, he's in the wrong game," Ryan said.

In all, the Red Sox launched four homers — Fred Lynn connected off Chuck Dobson, making his first appearance in 16 days, in the eighth — and it's a wonder nobody in What would Abner Doubleday (or Bowie Kuhn) say? Batting practice—in lobby!

BOSTON—Batting practice for the Angels begins at noon today.

In the lobby of the Sheraton-Boston Hotel.

Naturally, no breakage is expected.

Frequently accused by their critics of wielding bats constructed of balsa wood or bamboo, the Angels will go one better and haul out their styrofoam models today.

The batting practice pitcher, who may turn out to be the desk clerk, will have a dozen plastic whiffle balls to work with, ordered specially for the occasion.

Ringmaster Dick Williams has arranged the side-show.

one-upmanship, is offering today's event as a rebuttal to Boston pitcher Bill Lee.

After defeating the Angels 5-2 in Anaheim May 11, Lee flippantly echoed the sentiments of Texas manager Billy Martin when he remarked, "Now I know why the Angels could take batting practice in a hotel lobby and not break anything."

"Lee is pitching today so we thought we'd tune up properly for him," Williams snickered. "No use taking any hitting at the park."

The manager says he'll pay for any damages.

He is not expected to be found reaching for his wallet. Besides, the Sheraton-Boston doesn't have any chandeliers.

SPORTS NOT ALL FUN AND GAMES

LONDON (UPI) — Sports are just as much a rat race as business and many an athlete winds up on the psychiatrist's couch. Dr. J.A. Harrington told a meeting of the Institute of Sports Medicine.

Harrington told the experts he was going to explode a few myths, especially that sports contributes to a sound mind in a sound body.

"This may be true in a physical sense," he said, "but the assumption that sportsmen are psychologically the fittest is subject to many exceptions. You can have an athlete with a superbly fit body who is psychologically in a mess.

"There are," he said, "many facets of the present-day sporting scene that are far from satisfactory from the emotional point of view."

Harrington said that with television, newspaper and magazine coverage, sport has replaced religion as a reason for existence and a way of life for many. He added:

"There is another myth that sportsmen can show the rest of the community the most healthy way in which to live their lives. Sporting protagonists suggest that greater investment of resources in sport would make us healthier, happier, make us live longer and would reduce delinquency, vandalism, etc. This, I maintain, is a misconception...the sportsman is more than an occasional visitor to the psychiatrist's couch."

Harrington said sporting activity is valuable insofar as it contributes to man's need to sublimate his aggression in a socially-acceptable manner by transferring the competitive struggle to the sports field.

"But sport," he went on, "is now big business and like big business it has its own but less well-known rat race. Even the casual weekend sportsman has become aware that he is under pressure.

The advent of mass leisure has been accompanied by a passionate interest in sport which many now take far more seriously than anything else in their lives."

Among other points Harrington made:

- "Sport is certainly a strong rival to sex as a topic of conversation in clubs and pubs and a few young men will go so far as to admit that they think of little else.

- "Pleasure and delight seem nowadays less prominent than frustration and anguish on the sports field. Victory is paramount and this is denied to the majority. The professional sportsman cannot afford to be a persistent loser but professional aspirations have entered the amateur field so today most people feel winning is the most important thing, and losing may be regarded as humiliating or even disastrous.

- "If one wants to win, the opponent must be regarded as an enemy and not a friend until the game is over, but such an attitude often evokes guilt feelings...unfortunately these paranoid activities are sometimes transferred to encounters off the sports field and this may explain why there are outbursts of hooliganism between opposing players.

- "Increasing age is as much an enemy of the athlete as it is of the beauty queen, and the age of peak performance is constantly decreasing.

- "Man's obsession with sport can be a real threat to marriage and not a few homes have been broken on the playing fields of Eton. Women's more recent obsession with sport has imposed a further strain on the institution of marriage. So much male and female libido are now invested in sport there is little left to sustain some marriages.

From principal's chair to 2nd row Indy's Sneva thrives on speed

Knight News Service
INDIANAPOLIS — A year ago, at the age of 25, Tom Sneva retired as principal of a junior high school in Sprague, Wash.

"Retired isn't quite the right word. I should have said resigned," Sneva admitted.

You've got to be pretty quick to advance to a principalship in three years, but if speed is the criteria, Sneva already is way ahead in his second career.

When the green flag drops Sunday for the start of the 59th Indianapolis 500-mile race, Sneva will be, at the very least, a contender for the $200,000 top prize. That's clicking right along for a guy who raced "mainly for fun" as recently as two years ago.

"I had a lot of fun and I made a few bucks," said Sneva who also proved his mettle by winning the Canadian-American modified racing championship in 1970 and 1971.

"But I didn't know how good I was — or if I was any good at all," Sneva admitted.

It's doubtful, but if Sneva has lingering doubts about his ability, the guys who run this multi-million-dollar sport don't.

Roger Penske, the 37-year-old former Philadelphia who heads a far flung business empire that includes one of the biggest and most successful racing teams in the world, thinks Sneva is a budding superstar.

"I THINK Tom Sneva has the potential to be very successful as a driver," Penske said during the off-season when he surprised the racing fraternity by signing the youngster to a two-year contract.

"Besides being quick and smooth, he has that seemingly inborn quality to stay out of trouble and, most importantly, to finish races," Penske explained.

"Yeah, I was a little surprised when Penske approached me about driving for him," Sneva admitted. "I felt I did well on the circuits last year, all things considered. But I didn't really think I did so well as to impress one of the top teams."

In 1974, Sneva's first full season on the championship trail, he drove for Grant King, one of USAC's better mechanics who is forced to operate on a small budget and builds his own racers by copying the best design factors from the most successful cars.

Sneva drove all 11 races on the schedule; more often than not he was competitive and had a top finish of fifth in a 250-mile at Michigan International Speedway.

"I HAVEN'T been happy with the way we've been finishing. We should be in the top four every time out," admitted Sneva who has been plagued by the kind of things one doesn't expect from a super team.

At Phoenix, in March, he spun, then lost more than a lap in the pits because of a bad tire. He led the Trenton 200 in April but wasted precious minutes in the pits and fell several laps behind because of a rag clogging his refueling line.

"On top of that, we've been running conservatively on horsepower," Sneva explained. "Roger had trouble getting his cars to finish the last couple of years and the strategy so far has been to make the engines last and gradually increase the power."

Off what has transpired so far this month to Sneva and his teammate Bobby Allison, the Penske team appears to have gotten it act together.

Donohue escapes Belgian injury

ZOLDER, Belgium (AP) — Race driver Mark Donohue walked away from a 120 mile an hour crash in the first qualifying session Friday for Sunday's Belgian Formula 1 Grand Prix.

Donohue's Penske race car was seriously damaged, but the team believed that it could return for the race today. Carlos Pace, of Brazil, in a Brabham, set the fastest qualifying time Friday at 101.16 mph, followed by the Ferrari of Austrian Miki Lauda.

In the week of practice preceding the opening of time trials and the week that followed, the team lost only one of the $30,000 turbocharged Offy engines. That was the fault of a bad clutch in Allison's car.

In times trials when it counted most, Sneva was fourth fastest with a four-lap average of 190.094 mph. That gives him the inside starting spot on the second row, directly behind three-time winner Foyt and in front of defending champion Johnny Rutherford. Two rows back will be Allison who was 13th fastest at 184.398 mph.

Indianapolis, with all its pomp, circumstance and mostly riches, is the ultimate dream for most race drivers. But for Tom Sneva, it is far from everything.

"There are other things I'd like to do, perhaps stock cars or road racing and, with that in mind, there's no other team I could be with that would be better for me," Sneva admitted.

Maybe the Grand Prix circuit someday? "If I'm good enough," he answered simply.

'Baby-face' Mahaffey guns to Memphis lead

Combined News Services

MEMPHIS — Baby-faced John Mahaffey shot a 4-under-par 68 Friday to take a two-stroke lead in the second round of the Danny Thomas Memphis Golf Classic.

The 27-year-old, fourth-year pro from Houston, Tex., who looks a decade younger, had shared the lead with Tom Weiskopf and Andy North after an opening round 65. Despite his 68, Mahaffey was not satisfied with his performance.

"With the players you've got up there on that (leader) board, I'd like to get a 14 or 15-stroke lead," he said.

Gene Littler, who also shot 68 Friday, was two strokes behind at 135. Jack Nicklaus, with scores of 66-70, and Weiskopf, who shot 71, were tied for third at 136.

Larry Hinson, who was tied with Nicklaus in fourth place Thursday, had a 71 for a 36-hole total of 137. North dropped to a 74 and was among eight players at 139.

"I have driven it almost letter perfect on every hole," said the blond-haired Mahaffey, who is called "Ugly John" by the other players because of his delicate good looks.

Nicklaus, on the other hand, said his tee shots were bad.

"I missed eight fairways," golf's all-time leading money winner said. "That's a lot of fairways to miss."

"I usually don't miss eight fairways in an entire tournament."

Littler credited his iron play for his success.

"The fairways are so good, you don't hit any of those funny-looking little shots," he said. "You hit more greens."

Mahaffey had a chance to extend his lead when he came to the 538-yard 18th hole, but chose instead to play conservatively. He hit his drive about five yards short of a marker.

"I wanted to go for it today," he said, "but I didn't."

The conservative strategy worked. The tournament leader hit a wedge to within 10 feet of the cup and sank the birdie putt.

Gary Player, the defending Memphis champion, shot a 71 Friday for a 36-hole total of 139. He missed a 15-inch putt on one hole, but said the round was good "other than that."

"I played a little bit better than my score," Player said.

Chinese tracksters friendly — and slow

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — The pretty girl in the red track suit giggled when asked how it felt to be the only Chinese competitor to beat the Americans on the final day of the track and field meet in Shanghai.

"I feel only friendship," replied Chi Hai-chen, giving her raven braids a nervous toss after jumping 5-8 1/2 to win the women's high jump.

Her teammates expressed agreement.

"Success is a matter for only a short period. The everlasting thing is friendship," said Wang Tan, winner in the discus Thursday. "Understanding each other is the important thing," added Li Hsia, who won the women's javelin Thursday.

Another crowd of 30,000

sat through a steady drizzle to watch the United States close out its two-day good-will competition here by sweeping 30 of 33 events. Over-all, the U.S. has taken 62 victories in the 66 events contested since arriving in China 10 days ago, prompting an observation from distance runner Dick Buerkle.

"I think there's a little tension because we're doing so well," said Buerkle, who turned in a 3:41.9 clocking in the 1,500 meters Friday — the equivalent of a sub-four-minute mile — for the best performance of the meet.

"People are pretty competitive. The Chinese say 'Friendship first, competition second,' but somewhere along the line you can't have both completely that way. We're beating them now pretty good and I don't think they like that too much."

"The Chinese have a wealth of potential in these juniors," said Dr. Leroy Walker, head coach of the 1976 U.S. Olympic team, of the young Chinese athletes.

"When they are able to refine their techniques, they will be very formidable. I think they would be wise to shift their attention to these youngsters and point to 1980."

'Junior' tries to follow in dad's footsteps

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A party who calls himself Peter Lorre Jr. recently completed a starring role in "The Sons of Sassoun."

using the Lorre name in the credits.

He was prohibited from employing the moniker during the original Lorre's lifetime.

Lorre Jr., with shaved head, pop-eyes and nervous giggle, lives in an identity limbo.

He is convinced he is the son of the late character actor. Others aren't so sure.

Junior looks enough like Peter Lorre to be his son, but he doesn't carry a birth certificate around with him. Who does?

He created a tempest in 1961 when he surfaced in Hollywood searching for dear old dad. Lorre promptly hauled his namesake into court where Junior was ordered to desist from calling himself Peter Lorre Jr.

Cut to the quick, Junior went into the insurance business, acting now and then in television shows.

He has a German accent you could cut with an iron cross. Lorre was Hungarian. But Junior can explain this.

"Dad lived in Germany

A PERSON who calls himself Peter Lorre Jr. poses with a picture of the late actor Peter Lorre.

during his youth," he said. "I was born in 1934 and Dad left Germany to escape the Nazis. His real name was Rosenberg."

Junior used the name Peter Eugene Weingand.

So far as is known Lorre never publicly admitted being his papa.

Junior, a vegetarian, interrupted himself to order an omelet for lunch. When it was served he gagged and croaked,

"There's meat in there! I haven't eaten meat in eight years."

He swallowed some water and regained his composure.

"When I came to Hollywood my father was very upset," he continued. "He was under contract to American International Pictures. They were upset too."

"Dad's hands were tied. My appearance put him in an awkward position. So he went to court. When he was placed on the stand he neither denied me nor acknowledged me."

If anything, Lorre ignored him altogether. So far as is known they were never photographed together. A couple of years after the court appearance Lorre departed this vale.

Junior fondled a metal ornament around his neck. It was a flying saucer of sorts which, he explained, "I designed myself after seeing it in my backyard some time ago."

With his shaved noggin and bulging eyes, Junior looks as if he might have stepped from the conveyance himself.

He had just been to a Count Dracula Society meeting, something Lorre the original would have abhorred.

"Dad appeared in a lot of horror movies, but never a Dracula picture," Junior said. "Bela Lugosi did those parts. I wouldn't mind playing in one of them."

Junior went to court after Lorre's death, managing to overturn the court ruling forbidding him to use the name Peter Lorre Jr. Indeed, he is so registered with the Screen Actors Guild.

"I don't like people to think I am copying my father as an actor," he said. "But I am comfortable in his type of roles. It probably runs in the family."

"It would be fun to do a remake of 'The Maltese Falcon' or a television series on 'Mr. Moto.' Those were dad's favorites."

"I was with my father in his apartment the night before he died. It was very sad. He always called me 'Junior.' That's why I will never drop that from my name."

Did Junior inherit anything from Lorre on that good man's death?
 "Not a penny," Junior said. "He died a quarter of a million dollars in debt."

If Lorre demitted that Junior not use his name, it stands to reason he would not stand high in his will.

But Junior brims with filial piety. At least he now has the name.

Ex-driver to cover race

Jackie Stewart praises Indy safety equipment

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Some persons may consider the Indianapolis Motor Speedway an arena where safety precautions are nil, to put it mildly. But retired auto racing champion Jackie Stewart isn't among them.

"I've always considered Indy to be the best-equipped facility in the world for an emergency situation or accident," says Stewart, an outspoken advocate of racing safety during his later years in the sport.

"Because of the personnel, the fire trucks, the ambulances, there are so many emergency equipment units available that no matter where an accident occurs on the track it's immediately serviced."

The 35-year-old Scot, who drove in the Indianapolis 500 in 1966 and 1967, will be at Indy on Sunday as one of the ABC-TV crew covering the race. ABC will air it on a delayed basis Sunday night.

Stewart says officials at Indy have made the course a safer one over the years, particularly by putting up so-called "debris fences" to protect spectators and heightening a wall in front of the track's pit area.

Asked what other changes he'd like made at Indy, he said one he sees as obvious is the installation of a "strong and robust debris fence protecting the pit lane on the front straightaway." Such fences consist of strong metal uprights which hold up heavy duty chain link fences and are backed by taut metal ropes. He said one should be put up behind the wall separating the pit area and the track to protect drivers, mechanics and others should a collision send a car flying towards the pit area.

"Now, that is an important addition that is necessary because I consider that there is still the very strong risk that a car could get into the pit lane" after a crash, he said.

Stewart, who has helped ABC cover the Indy race since 1971, won the world driving championship three times before quitting racing.

"I had been motor racing as an amateur and as a professional for 13 years and I enjoyed my career enormously," he said of his decision in October 1973 to leave the sport for good.

"But I felt a strong responsibility to my family, to my wife and children in exposing them to the sort of risks that motor racing provides. And I really felt that for them I had to retire."

UCLA Library gets gift of Alcoa Playhouse films

The National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences UCLA Library has received a gift of 231 films representing outstanding Alcoa programs. The collection includes several Emmy winners among the programs originally seen on the Alcoa-Goodyear Theater Television Playhouse on NBC and the Alcoa Premiere program on ABC.

Robert Lewine, president of the National TV

Academy, and Elwin Svenson, UCLA assistant chancellor, accepted the gift from Robert Kiskaddon, president of Century City Inc., and vice president of Western operations, Alcoa Properties, in ceremonies at UCLA.

The NATAS-UCLA Television Library was established in 1965 through an agreement between the University of California and the National TV Academy. The collection has grown since from 20 programs to more than 4,000, one of the largest in the United States.

In addition to the new Alcoa acquisition, other major holdings are the Hallmark Hall of Fame series, the March of Time, several Wolper productions, Ralph Story's Los Angeles, the Negro in American Culture series and an extensive collection of programs about and with the late President Kennedy.

DAVID ESTRADA
His job...It isn't for everybody

No claustrophobe need apply

Job's a cement pipe cinch

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

It's a job which most people wouldn't take on a bet, but David Estrada seems casual enough about it. Estrada lies on his stomach on a sort of sled with wheels and is drawn slowly, feet first, through about 650 feet of 20-inch diameter pipe, buried about eight feet underground.

Immediately in front of his face, and following him through the pipe, is a machine which sprays a 5/16-inch coating of cement mortar on the inside of the pipe.

"It's not a job for anyone with claustrophobia," said Bill Freitag, senior engineering inspector with the Long Beach Water Department.

Estrada works for Ameron Pipe Lining Division, which is placing cement mortar lining in the Water Department's 20-inch main under Wardlow Road from Cherry Avenue to Pacific Avenue.

It's part of a $198,000 contract, which also includes lining 1,900 feet of water main beneath Carson Street, west of Lakewood Boulevard.

The mains originally were installed in 1925 and, like others of that time, are cast iron.

Although their exterior is in good condition, the interior picks up rust and corrosion.

This corrosion causes turbulence in the water, which sharply reduces the flow, explained Clyde N. Moore, general manager of the Water Department. On occasion, rust particles break loose and cause "dirty" water.

Today, the department installs primarily asbestos-cement pipe, which eliminates this problem. Occasionally, steel pipe is installed, but is lined prior to installation, Moore said.

The department began its lining program in 1956 and, to date, has completed about 17 miles. It only lines pipe of 12 inches or more in diameter. Smaller pipe can be replaced more economically than lined, Moore explained.

Before starting a lining project, the Water Department installs temporary water lines on the surface to serve customers during the construction.

Excavations of about eight by 10 or 12 feet are made at intervals of about 650 feet along the water main and dug down to expose the pipeline. A section of about eight feet is cut from the pipe at each excavation.

The first step is to clean away accumulated corrosion, and this is done by dragging a scraping tool through the pipe several times. The mortar vehicle then is drawn through the pipe. The cement mortar is fed to the machine through a hose, and is sprayed onto the inner wall from a rotating nozzle.

Members of the Board of Water Commissioners were on the Wardlow Road job Thursday to inspect a new mortar machine, which is electrically operated.

Thickness of the lining can be adjusted by the speed of the rotating nozzle, or by the speed of the machine through the pipe. It is the responsibility of Estrada and other operators to monitor the lining operation and adjust the speed by calling instructions to the winch operator at the other end of the pipe.

No telephone or other communication device is needed, however. The main itself acts as a "phone" and carries the voice easily the 650 feet between excavations.

Normally, the machine moves through the main at a speed of seven feet per minute. That means that Estrada is confined to his 20-inch metal "workshop" for about an hour and a half for each trip.

"Like I say, this is not a job for everybody," said Freitag.

CG chief rules out force in boat seizures

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

The commandant of the U. S. Coast Guard said Friday that the use of American armed forces to recover the freighter Mayaguez does not necessarily justify similar action against Ecuador for its repeated seizures of U. S. tuna boats and their crews.

"There is a possibility of drawing a parallel between the two cases," said Adm. Owen Siler. But there is also reason to regard them as quite distinct, he added.

Siler, addressing reporters at a news conference in Long Beach, said the Mayaguez, which was seized some 60 miles off the Cambodian coast, was engaged in what is known as innocent passage—even though it was within several miles of a small Cambodian-claimed island in the Gulf of Thailand.

The tuna boats, on the other hand, while they may be within their rights to be within 200 miles of Ecuador's coast, cannot be said to be in innocent passage as long as they're fishing, he explained.

At the same time, however, Siler made it plain that the United States does not recognize the 200-mile territorial limit that Ecuador claims. By paying the crew's fines, he said, the American government is saying, in effect, that "our people are being wronged."

The use of American Marines and Navy vessels to forcibly recover the Mayaguez and its crew appears to have acted as a stimulus to those who favor American intervention in connection with Ecuador's seizure of U. S. tuna boats, having revived calls for military force in the event of new seizures. But Siler's remarks indicated that the United States still hasn't changed its mind about avoiding a show of force in Ecuador.

(Earlier this year, Rep. Bob Wilson, R-San Diego, called on the government to "send planes, submarines and destroyers" into Ecuadorian ports to free U. S. tuna fishermen who were being held captive at the time.)

The 200-mile territorial limit has been a vexing problem for the United States and a number of other nations. While the recent Law of the Sea conference in Geneva failed to resolve the issue, the nations of the world appear to be moving toward the twin concept of a 200-mile economic resource zone and a 12-mile territorial limit.

Siler said Congress probably will agree to the 200-mile economic zone within a few months, adding that the zone would encompass fishing rights. But he also acknowledged that a worldwide agreement on the 200-mile limit may be a long time in coming, since there are so many thorny side issues to settle.

In other remarks, Siler minimized the possible catastrophic risks of liquefied natural gas terminals, one of which is being considered for Terminal Island. "We've done a lot of risk analysis, (and) there's not that much of a danger," he told reporters.

Seven speakers slated at LBSU

Ms. Eu to address graduates

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Seven speakers, including California Secretary of State March Fong Eu, are scheduled for commencement ceremonies at Long Beach State University May 30-June 1.

Other speakers include author Adela Rogers St. Johns and former State Controller Houston Flournoy. More than 5,000 undergraduates and graduate students will receive degrees at eight on-campus ceremonies. Commencement exercises will be held for each of LBSU's six schools and the Center for Public Policy. Graduates of the school of letters and science will be divided into two groups.

The graduation for the school of fine arts will feature presentations by students of dance and theater arts and members of the Studio Jazz Ensemble.

The fine arts program will be the first of the eight and will be held Friday at noon in the south plaza of the University Union.

The union's center courtyard will be the site of the commencement for the Center for Public Policy and Administration on Friday at 3:30 p.m.

Robert E. Chase, assistant city administrative officer for Los Angeles, will speak on "Can Anyone Really Understand Public Administration?"

Mrs. Eu will speak on "Rediscovering the American Dream" at the commencement of the school of education on Friday at 5:30 p.m. in the south plaza of the union.

The following Saturday, June 8, at 4:30 p.m., she will deliver the commencement address to approximately 1,400 graduates at Cerritos College.

Mrs. Eu served eight years in the California Assembly and is a strong supporter of equal opportunity for women.

The school of applied arts and sciences will hold its commencement on Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the central quad section of the campus.

Dr. Melvin Casberg, former dean of the St. Louis University School of Medicine and past president of the Los Angeles Academy of Medicine, will be the speaker. He'll talk on "The Challenge of Insecurity."

Commencement for business administration graduates will be at 9 a.m. in the central quad area.

Speaker will be Dr. Yujiro Yamamoto, president of Y Square Associates. He'll talk on "Empathy and Creativity." Yamamoto is credited with marketing the first automatic telephone answering machine.

At 11 a.m. Saturday, the school of engineering will hold its graduation in the south plaza of the university union.

Speaker will be Warren H. Eckert, a Long Beach attorney, whose topic will be "The Engineer's Role in Modern Society." Eckert is president of the Long Beach Bar Association.

The school of letters and science will hold two commencement ceremonies.

Social science students will graduate at 4 p.m. Saturday in the central quad area.

They'll hear Flournoy, the Republican gubernatorial candidate who lost to Gov. Brown. Flournoy's topic will be, "If You Don't Participate, Don't Complain."

Ms. St. Johns will speak at the graduation exercises for humanities students at 4 p.m. Sunday. She'll talk on "The Rest of Your Life."

Payment to L.B. urged to cover health service cost

By NOEL SWANN
Our L.A. Bureau

Supervisors Friday were urged to authorize payment of $1.4 million to the City of Long Beach to cover the cost of public health services in fiscal year 1975-76.

However, Chief Administrative Officer Harry Hufford urged the board to turn down a request by the city that the county pick up $40,132 as the city's matching contribution for its federally-funded drug abuse program.

Hufford said payment of $1,492,768 for provision of health services for the city is $45,129 lower than budgeted in 1974-75. However, he said the proposed figure is based on the city's 1974 workload, current staffing standards applied by the county and budget policies applied to the county's Department of Health Services.

The county has been reimbursing the city for provision of public health services since 1964 with funding based on the amount that would have been budgeted if the county were providing the services in the city.

Hufford said the $45,129 net decrease includes some provision for salary raises which, however, are offset by a staffing reduction and the board's freeze-on-hiring policy.

Hufford said the drug abuse program for which the city wants the county to pick up its matching share is funded by a $550,000 federal grant from the National Institute of Drug Abuse.

He said the city has based its request on the county's responsibility to provide drug abuse services, and the fact that its drug program serves county residents outside the city.

Hufford noted, however, the county does not provide cash matching grants for any of the National Institute programs elsewhere in the county.

He said it would be inadvisable to pick up the Long Beach portion because it would conflict with county policy; because the county's mental health allocation is inadequate to fund some of the county's programs; and a commitment of matching funds could be construed by the city as a commitment for the county to pick up the full $550,000 federal share of the program when the grant expires in 1976-77.

Additionally, Hufford pointed out, budgetary constraints for countywide programs in 1975-76 demand that all available revenues be used for maintaining basic county services.

Supervisors will consider the recommendation Tuesday.

Westminster tax battle gets hotter

Partisans continued exchanging charges Friday in the hot rerun of Westminster School District's 87-cent tax override that comes before the voters again Tuesday.

Mrs. Roney Gaston, president of the 60-member Professional Educators Group that has unanimously backed the override, issued a statement claiming that anti-override leaders of the 350-member Westminster Teachers' Association actually represent only 63 opponents.

She raised publicly "the threatening of one board member's life and the ransacking of another's house," which she called "one of the worst things which has developed" in the new campaign for the override.

The same override was defeated about two to one on March 4.

The authorization to hike property taxes to $3.52 is needed because the district faces an $800,000 deficit for the fiscal year beginning July 1 despite the cutting of $200,000 in a projected provisional budget, said Mrs. Gaston, a special education teacher at Sequoia school.

The victim of the telephone threat, Mrs. Harlene Barrett, said Friday that incident occurred April 29 when the voice of "an older woman" told her, "The same thing that happened to Kennedy is going to happen to you."

Mrs. Barrett, who said she immediately hung up on the caller and reported the threat to Westminster police the same day, has continued to receive silent harassment phone calls.

Dixie Jordan, president of Westminster Teachers' Association (WTA) said many "people from the community are stunned" at Mrs. Gaston's publicizing of the incidents concerning Mrs. Barrett and the other school board member, Mrs. Ada Clegg.

Miss Jordan said such circulation is an adverse and unfounded reflection on the WTA and "we are investigating what legal recourse we might have."

The other incident reported to sheriff's deputies was the ransacking of Mrs. Clegg's home May 15, when she returned from that night's school board meeting to find "almost every room in the house" disrupted. The vandalism in which nothing was taken, was reported to the Orange County sheriff's office.

School tax on ballot

Compton Unified School District voters will decide Tuesday on what school Supt. Rodney S. Mahoney has called a "tax continuation" which would allow about $60 more per student per year.

On the line is renewal of a 92-cent property tax override, presently due to expire June 30.

Mahoney said override renewal would allow annual expenditure per student to rise from $1,035.54 to $1,095.69.

The district has 32,000 students, but enrollment is expected to decline by 2,400 this year. Enrollment has already dropped 8,000 during the last five years.

Mahoney said the district expects to have a cash surplus at the end of the fiscal year, compared with a $1.5 million deficit at the beginning last July 1. But next year's school program will be down to "bare bones" if the renewal fails, he said.

Los Altos Center in receivership

The Los Altos Shopping Center in Long Beach has been placed in receivership.

Legal counsel for Harry Newman Jr., who has been named as the receiver, emphasized Friday that management of the center and its relations with the 21 stores will be unchanged.

The center, Long Beach's largest centralized suburban shopping facility, includes a Broadway department store and smaller specialty and variety shops. It is located at Bellflower Boulevard and Stearns Street.

The appointment of a receiver apparently stemmed from the ongoing and intricate bankruptcy proceedings involving Westgate-California Corp. and the C. Arnholt Smith financial interests headquartered in San Diego.

Westgate-California Corp. owned the center in the 1960s and, though the property had been sold to other related interests, held a third trust deed on the center. It was Westgate-Calfornia, now in the hands of a trustee, which moved to have the regional center placed in the hands of a receiver.

The action was taken by stipulation and agreed to by all parties, including the Los Altos Management Co., Newman's counsel said.

The receivership has no specified time duration but several sources emphasized that the end result of the action could place the control of the property back with the Los Altos Management Co. and its parent British Columbia Investment.

The naming of Newman as receiver took place in Los Angeles Superior court on May 2.

Newman is president of Newman Properties, a Long Beach-based developer and manager of regional shopping centers and smaller neighborhood centers. Newman's major Southern California interest is the Mall of Orange. He also has served as president of the International Council of Shopping Centers.

It's called 'dash' in Africa

You funnel cash to stay 'alive' overseas

By MICHAEL C. JENSEN
N.Y. Times Service
First of a two-part series

NEW YORK—American companies doing business abroad are spending hundreds of millions of dollars each year for agents' fees, commissions and outright payoffs to foreign officials. The payments range from $5 bribes for customs agents and other minor officials to multimillion-dollar rake-offs on defense contracts.

Sometimes even heads of state are involved. The practice of funneling cash into the hands of government officials or their representatives is long-standing and is defended by many businessmen as the only way they can compete effectively abroad. Indeed, some such payments are officially sanctioned by the United States Government.

NEVERTHELESS, the practice is coming under increased scrutiny in the United States, spurred by disclosures that the United Brands Co., based in New York, paid more than $2 million in bribes to officials in Honduras and Europe. The Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on multinational corporations has begun a full inquiry into the United Brands case.

It is also looking into expenditures by the Northrup Corp., which paid out more than $30 million in agents' fees and commissions, much of it for overseas sales, from 1971 to 1973. The Gulf Oil Co.'s disbursements of more than $4 million overseas, most of it reportedly to a single unidentified country, is also being investigated.

Bob R. Dorsey, the company chairman, reportedly told the Securities and Exchange Commission that foreign politicians had forced them to pay large amounts of cash in order to stay in business. Until now, most of the government attention to corporate bribery has come from the Securities and Exchange Commission, which is responsible for insuring adequate disclosure of corporate activities to shareholders. The current investigations are an outgrowth of the Watergate prosecutions of illegal campaign contributions.

The Internal Revenue Service, which is concerned with the proper handling of foreign transactions for tax purposes, also is looking into some of the foreign situations.

Such action may be illegal in the host country, but bribery laws are seldom enforced in many parts of the world. Few American businessmen will discuss their companies' payoff practices openly, although some agreed to interviews with news reporters with the understanding that they not be identified. Some of the most blatant cases of bribery have become public, however, and a few have spawned major scandals overseas.

In the United Brands case, for example, Eli M. Black, the chief executive of the company, committed suicide shortly before the company's overseas bribes became known publicly. The ensuing scandal also resulted in the overthrow of the chief of state of Honduras, Gen. Oswaldo Lopez Arellano.

WHILE SOME commissions and agents' fees are nothing more than thinly disguised bribes, others are said to be legitimate payments to local representatives overseas, designed to cut through red tape.

Industry Week

Clean air deadline?

CLEVELAND—Many of the nation's industrial plants will not meet Clean Air Act deadlines that in most areas will arrive in July, Industry Week reported Friday.

Many enforcement officials and industry executives are groping for an answer as to what happens if Congress doesn't extend the deadline for compliance, the magazine for managers pointed out.

The answer, it seems, is that somebody else—either a state agency or the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)—will extend deadlines for plants which find they need more time to install emissions control equipment.

But, there's a question whether these other groups can do it legally.

Although enforcement agencies recognize that it's impractical in many cases to insist on compliance with the letter of the law, irate citizens or environmental groups may take a different view, Industry Week pointed out.

PARTICULARLY troublesome are major sources of pollution—such as electric powerplants and steel mills—whose emissions cause a violation of national ambient air quality standards.

THE COURT'S ruling, however, left states puzzled over how to deal with sources which will violate ambient air standards. The federal EPA faced essentially the same problem. It determined it could meet its responsibility by issuing enforcement orders.

The Defense Department authorizes defense contractors to pay "reasonable" agents' fees as part of their "cost of sales" and to pass these costs along to the Pentagon when it acts as the middleman in arms contracts.

In an advisory memorandum issued to several defense contractor associations last summer, the Defense Security Assistance Agency said United States arms manufacturers selling major systems usually limited their standard agents' fees to 4 to 6 per cent of the selling price. It added, however, that on less expensive equipment the percentage sometimes exceeded 25 per cent.

SOME MIDDLE Easterners have gotten rich on such fees. Persian Gulf sources say that Adnan M. Khashoggi, a Saudi Arabian businessman who has an internal string of industrial and financial ventures, including a bank in California, made his initial capital as the Saudi agent for Raytheon Hawk missiles and Lockheed aircraft bought by Saudi Arabia.

Khashoggi's connection is said to be his friendship with Prince Sultan, the Saudi defense minister, and his commissions were said to run to $10 million to $20 million.

Although the most dramatic instances of corruption are those involving millions of dollars, a far more widespread type of bribery takes place at a much lower level. It is variously called baksheesh, la morditoria or dash, depending on whether it is offered in the Middle East, Latin America or Africa.

One businessman in Africa said in an interview: "In countries like Nigeria and Zaire, you have to pay small bribes, called 'dash,' to get anything done. It's part of the price of visas, getting customs clearance on materials—even getting your suitcase in the instance of Nigeria."

IN OTHER PARTS of the world, the pressures take a different form. For example, one type of harassment for American companies in the Philippines is the stream of requests for donations for charities from government and military officials or members of their families.

Such requests, invariably granted, sometimes run to more than $100,000.

In Italy, on the other hand, requests are more likely to be for contributions to political parties.

An executive of a United States-controlled multinational electronics group, who insisted on anonymity, said: "To do business in Italy, as in other European countries, you have to render all sorts of favors, including outright bribery."

"IT'S UP TO your ingenuity to disguise such practices in reports to your board and in financial statements. You send lavish gifts to key people and their wives. You have your own workers install costly appliances in their seaside villas free of charge."

"You hire their relatives and proteges if you have staff vacancies. Sometimes cool cash changes hands."

"Don't expect company headquarters to give you any instructions on how to handle such situations," he continued. "You are completely on your own—just keep the sales performance going up."

NEXT: It happens in U.S., too.

Douglas promotes Dubil as C.S. Glasgow retires

Eugene F. Dubil, an engineer with Douglas Aircraft Co. since 1948, has been named vice president in charge of engineering for the company.

The 48-year-old engineer succeeds Charles S. Glasgow, who is retiring next month.

Until his recent appointment, Dubil was director of the Douglas research team that is developing the prototype of a STOL cargo transport for the Air Force, STOL standing for short takeoff and landing.

In his 27 years with Douglas—now a division of McDonnell Douglas Corp.—Dubil has held a number of senior design positions in the company's airliner programs.

At one time he was chief design engineer for the DC8; in 1968 he was appointed chief design engineer for the DC10 trijet, and in 1971 he became director and chief designer for all of the company's aircraft programs.

Dubil was born in Livingston, Cal., and received his engineering degree from UCLA. He served two years in the Navy and two years in the Navy civil engineering corps. He has a wife, Berlien, and two sons. They live in Manhattan Beach.

Glasgow, a veteran of 39 years with the company, was vice president in charge of engineering for the past four years. He has been associated with a long list of Douglas-built planes, among them such military craft as the B19, C47, C54, C74, C124, C133, A4, C98 and TBD (a torpedo bomber). Also such commercial transports as the DC3, DC4, DC6, DC8, DC9 and DC10.

Glasgow started as a stress analyst at the company's Santa Monica plant and, after a succession of jobs, became vice president of engineering design and development at Long Beach in 1968.

An associate fellow of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, he lives with his wife, Janet, in Newport Beach.

As a youth, Glasgow attended Franklin Junior High School in Long Beach. He was also in the first graduating class at Wilson High. He lived in Long Beach for 15 years.

In his retirement, the veteran engineer will continue to indulge in passion for yachting.

The six companies, which produced most of the estimated 800,000 hearing aids distributed in this country last year, include Belton Electronics Corp., Chicago—the giant of the industry; Radioear Corp., Canonsburg, Pa.; Sonotone Corp., Elmsford, N.Y.; Dahlberg Electronics, Inc., Golden Valley, Minn.; and Qualitone Division of Seeburg Industries, Inc., and Maico Hearing Instruments Division of Tectron Inc., both of Minneapolis.

The FTC issued the complaints last month after consent order negotiations with the companies were unsuccessful. Five of the six companies—Qualitone was the exception—appeared separately before FTC administrative law judges this week to define the legal and technical issues involved. A pre-hearing conference has not yet been scheduled for Qualitone. Ear aid firms 'deaf'

By AL EISELE

WASHINGTON—Leaders of the nation's $60 million-a-year hearing aid manufacturing industry are turning a deaf ear to efforts by the federal government to force them to tone down advertising claims for their products.

In the first round of pre-hearing conferences before an administrative law judge of the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), five major hearing aid manufacturers made it clear that they will fight FTC charges that they have made false, unsubstantiated and unfair advertising claims for the performance of their products.

The litigation, which is already a year old and which is likely to drag on for at least another year, is of vital importance to the industry as well as an estimated 3 million Americans who use hearing aids and another 14 million who are hard of hearing.

The FTC action also could directly affect the nation's retail hearing aid sales and service industry, which last year amounted to an estimated $180 million.

"Obviously, we have a tremendous interest in this litigation because some of the issues go to the heart of the successful marketing of hearing instruments in this country," James P. Inze, executive secretary of the industry's Washington-based trade association, the hearing aid industry conference, said this week.

INZE explained that his organization is not directly involved in the litigation, which was touched off last May when the FTC announced its intention to issue false advertising complaints against six major hearing aid manufacturers.

The six companies, which produced most of the estimated 800,000 hearing aids distributed in this country last year, include Belton Electronics Corp., Chicago—the giant of the industry; Radioear Corp., Canonsburg, Pa.; Sonotone Corp., Elmsford, N.Y.; Dahlberg Electronics, Inc., Golden Valley, Minn.; and Qualitone Division of Seeburg Industries, Inc., and Maico Hearing Instruments Division of Tectron Inc., both of Minneapolis.

5 indicted for 'shell firm' fraud

Associated Press

Four men, including a former FBI agent, and one woman were indicted for fraudulently using inactive corporations to attract stockholders, authorities said Friday.

Those indicted allegedly promoted the "shell" corporations to boost the price of the stock and then sold their own stock in the firms for a profit.

The corporations, all acquired in Salt Lake City, had been legally set up and had outstanding stock but were no longer active in business, U.S. Atty. William D. Keller said.

CHARGED with using "an assemblage of sham corporations" in a fraud scheme from November 1972 to May 1975 were Alexander Greenberg, also known as Alexander "Ozzie" Curtis, 46, Beverly Hills; Dwain L. Clark, 58, a Beverly Hills lawyer and FBI agent from 1940-52; Frances H. Cording, 31, Van Nuys; Robert Goodwin, 46, San Clemente, and Nathan Debin, 64, Woodstock, N.Y.

The indictment also charges the five with obstruction of justice and conspiracy to solicit perjury.

The defendants allegedly bought the shell corporations, and then made false statements about contracts in the works and new products, ready for the market, Keller said.

Investigators said victims in the scheme lost millions of dollars.

Shell corporations named in the indictment were Ammon Corp., Zenith Development Corp., World Mint, Inc. and Ship Stores, Inc.

FEDERAL authorities said they will try to get criminal indictments against other shell game operators in Salt Lake City. Gerald Boltz, Securities and Exchange regional administrator here, said Salt Lake City has been "a pesthole of shell promoters and con men generally."

The SEC has sued all the defendants except Clark for allegedly manipulating stock in World Mint and Ship Stores. That suit, filed in May 1974, is pending.

One example of the operation, Asst. U.S. Atty. William R. Hawes said, is that the Ammon Corporation held a demonstration at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York to show off a proposed new product that would trace the phone number of long distance callers.

California wine sales record set

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The California wine industry sold a record 36,106,000 gallons in the first quarter of 1975, the Wine Institute reported Friday.

Harry G. Serhis, institute president, said the 5.8 per cent increase for the first three months of the year represents a continuation of the upward trend of the last nine years.

In view of the generally unfavorable economic situation, he said, the increase is "proof of a broad acceptance by American consumers who are looking for quality and value."

Serhis said the near-record grape crush for 1974, combined with generally lower prices for grapes, resulted in a "favorable price situation for the consumer."

"Most California wine prices are holding level, in spite of the inflationary trend of the economy, and a few in the higher price range have, in fact, been lowered in price somewhat."

California table wine, accounting for about two-thirds of the state's production, increased in sales 6.9 per cent during the quarter.

After bank robbery

Bizarre escape ends in bus(t)

SACRAMENTO (AP)—A bank bandit's bizarre getaway ended quietly Friday at a bus stop in the Colusa County farming community of Arbuckle.

Along the way, the bandit's escape attempt caused closure of the Sacramento airport to both air and ground traffic as officers traced the getaway path over three counties and about 70 miles.

Arraigned late Friday on a bank robbery charge was Pedro Flores, 33, of Fresno. Officers said Flores had $600 in his pockets.

The holdup was rather ordinary; the getaway, extraordinary.

Here is what happened, as pieced together from reports of the FBI and six local police agencies:

A bandit in a business suit pretended he had a weapon in his pocket and robbed a teller of "quite a bit" of money at the Bank of America branch back one block from the state Capitol.

The man walked across the street and hailed a cab at the taxi stand across from the Capitol for a 15-mile trip to Sacramento Metropolitan Airport.

The bandit vanished at the United Airlines terminal. Both air and ground traffic was halted for about 45 minutes while scores of police combed the area.

Then the scene shifted another 15 miles north to Woodland in Yolo County, where a motorist reported that a man in old clothes paid him $20 for a ride from the airport in his pickup truck.

Police checked numerous reports, including one that a suspicious man boarded a bus headed northwest about 40 miles to the rural community of Arbuckle.

At Arbuckle, two deputies boarded the bus and found a man carrying "quite a bit of money." They said he surrendered without resistance.

Sheriff indicted on misconduct

EUREKA (AP)—Sheriff Gene Cox has been indicted by the Humboldt County grand jury on seven counts of willful and corrupt misconduct in office. It was announced Friday.

Cox, 48, who has been sheriff in the North State county since 1966, was indicted Thursday on charges associated with his last election campaign.

Among the counts, the grand jury accused Cox of allowing his campaign for reelection to be run from his office; allowing deputies in uniform, in county vehicles, to distribute his campaign literature; approving payment of overtime for that purpose; pressuring deputies in the campaign, and making statements to dissuade deputies from participating in the grand jury probe of Cox's office.

Cox is scheduled to be arraigned June 9. It was reported that Cox was served notice of his indictment Friday.

Court says ARB has fuel powers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The statewide Air Resources Board has the power to regulate the amount of lead in motor vehicle gasoline and cannot delegate this authority to local air pollution control districts, the California Supreme Court ruled Friday.

The unanimous decision by Justice Stanley Mosk ruled invalid a 1971 Orange County Air Pollution Control District rule requiring gradual reduction in the amount of lead contained in gasoline sold by retailers.

By July 1975, only traces of lead would have appeared in gasoline sold for cars within the district.

The Western Oil and Gas Association, a trade association of oil firms, challenged the rule and asked that its enforcement be prohibited.

The group claimed that the local district had authority to regulate emissions only from nonvehicular sources of pollution and it would be impractical to regulate the content of gasoline on a local basis.

The high court agreed and declared that the broad authority of the state Air Resources Board to control air pollution included power to regulate gasoline content if the board found such regulations necessary and technologically feasible.

This finding overruled a decision by the state Court of Appeal, which had held the board did not have such power.

The court said that in light of practical considerations it concluded the Legislature had intended to accord that power to the board.

"If we were to hold that the ARB has no power to regulate fuel content, we would be attributing to the Legislature an intention to deprive the agency of the only realistic means at its disposal to achieve the purposes of the act (which created it)," the court said.

San Diego Freeway bill gains

$90 state pay boost blocked

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Assembly budget writers sank Gov. Brown's new plan to give every state employee a $90 a month salary increase Friday and voted instead to give lowest paid workers a one-time "bonus."

Under the action taken by an Assembly ways and means subcommittee, most other employees would receive pay raises starting July 1 averaging 8.5 per cent.

THE MOVE represented a proposed compromise, but Brown administration representatives said the governor still wants his own proposal enacted.

The final legislative decision likely will be made next month when the governor's $11.3 billion proposed budget is written by a Senate-Assembly conference committee.

Brown on Thursday scuttled his original recommendation for an average 8.5 per cent employee pay raise and asked for an across-the-board $90 a month increase for all regardless of salary—ranging from $700 a month office clerks to $4,000 a month Supreme Court justices.

Administration representatives told lawmakers that the soaring cost of living hit hardest at the estimated 25,000 employees who earn $700 or less a month.

They insisted the $90 a month (or $1,080 a year) pay raise for every employee was the "fairest" way of distributing $190 million Brown earmarked for salary increases.

But Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post branded the plan illegal and warned that while the pay of clerical workers would surpass that of their counterparts in industry, the salaries of such persons as prison guards and highway patrolmen would fall behind their counterparts.

POST told the subcommittee that a flat, across-the-board increase should not be part of the salary structure, but indicated he favored a one-time "bonus" for the lowest paid employees.

The Democratic-dominated Senate Finance Committee shot down the plan shortly after Brown submitted it and the Assembly ways and means subcommittee did likewise early Friday morning.

The subcommittee agreed instead to add $25 million to Brown's budget for the lowest paid employees. The action disturbed Assembly Speaker Leo T. McCarthy and Ways and Means Chairman John F. Foran, both San Francisco Democrats.

The subcommittee met again at noon and rescinded the $25 million augmentation.

THE panel, chaired by Assemblywoman Pauline Davis, D-Portola, then adopted proposed compromise amendments that would grant the lowest paid workers a one-year-only "bonus" in addition to any percentage pay increase they might receive.

The subcommittee did not set a figure on the size of the "bonus" and it did not decide whether it would be paid in a single lump sum or included in regular paychecks over the next 12 months starting July 1.

Mrs. Davis said those issues would be decided by the Assembly-Senate conference committee.

"We shouldn't vote for this until we have determined what the amount would be," protested Assemblyman Robert Burke, R-Huntington Beach.

HE VOTED "no" while the three Democrats—Assemblymen Alan Sieroty of Los Angeles, John J. Miller of Oakland and Mrs. Davis voted "aye."

Task force formed to hunt 'Westside rapist'

Associated Press

A special police task force took to unmarked cars and even bicycles Friday in an effort to nab the "Westside rapist," who they believe is responsible for raping 23 elderly women, killing five of them.

"We think he probably looks around the neighborhood in the daytime for elderly women who are outside-taking care of their garden or emptying the trash—because he has consistently hit on women who live alone," said police Cmdr. Pete Hagen, press relations officer. The attacks have occurred over the past seven months.

The women, ranging in age from 50 to 93 with most in their 60s and 70s, all have lived within an approximately 10-mile vicinity in the Hollywood-Wilshire area, Hagen said.

THE LATEST victim was 76-year-old Effie Martin, whose body was found in her home Thursday by friends.

Police said at the time she had been raped, beaten and strangled. But on Friday, the county coroner's office refused to disclose the exact cause of death, saying the details may be important in polygraph examinations of suspects.

The coroner's office did say, however, that the killing bore enough resemblance to the others to link it to the man who has been dubbed the "Westside rapist," because the victims have lived on the west side of Los Angeles.

The "Westside rapist" attacked his first victim in November last year.

All the women have been assaulted late at night, and the first four who died were beaten to death, police said.

An undisclosed number of plainclothes and uniformed officers have been assigned to the task force formed especially for this series of crimes, much the same as a task force was used in the "Skid-Row Slasher" case earlier this year. The coroner's office also has formed a special team to work with police.

ALTHOUGH police have said it is possible more than one person is responsible for the attacks, Hagen said the similarities in most of the cases are such that officers believe it was only one man. He declined to specify what those similarities are.

Another indication that one man is involved, Hagen said, is that the women who have been able to provide a description of their molester have been in agreement for the most part.

There have been robberies in 18 of the cases, Hagen said.

ed from a pool of names taken from the list of voters in the 1972 presidential election.

The Army charged MacDonald in 1970 with the deaths of his wife Collette and daughters Kimberly and Kristen Jean, but dropped the charges after the investigating officer concluded they were not true.

The case was reopened last summer and MacDonald's attorneys contend this constitutes double jeopardy. Dupree will rule on that question and also on the defense argument that the case should be dropped because MacDonald was denied a speedy trial.

A MOTION to move the trial from Raleigh to California was taken under advisement by Dupree in an earlier pretrial hearing, but no decision has been made.

MacDonald claims his wife and children were killed by a band of hippie-like intruders who burst into his Ft. Bragg apartment. They were stabbed and beaten to death.

Dr. MacDonald motions weighed

RALEIGH (AP)—A federal judge Friday took under advisement defense motions in the murder case of Jeffrey MacDonald, a former Green Beret doctor charged with slaying his wife and two daughters at Ft. Bragg in 1970.

U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree did not rule on the motions as the pretrial hearing concluded Friday afternoon. He is expected to hand down a ruling in the next few weeks.

IN arguments Friday, MacDonald's attorney, Bernard Segal of San Francisco, returned to a motion asking that the murder indictment be dismissed on the grounds that the jury pool from which the grand jury was drawn did not properly represent minority groups.

MacDonald, now chief of emergency services at St. Mary Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif., was indicted in January by a federal grand jury convened last summer to reinvestigate the case. The grand jury was select-

Sheriff's copter crashes

Two Kern County sheriff's deputies suffered serious injuries when their patrol helicopter snared a communications line Friday and crashed. Pilot
